By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, April 14.—Four Americans today were reported killed in and around Puerta Cabezas, Nicaragua, and three reported missing as a result of attacks by insurgents in the last 48 hours.

The gunboat Asheville, carrying 75 United States marines, arrived at Puerta Cabezas last night. The American residents of that port, mostly employees of the Standard Fruit and Steamship Co. and the Bremen's Bluff Lumber Co., were reported concentrated on the waterfront or aboard the steamer Catalina.

The Navy Department said the insurgents threatening Puerta Cabezas were much stronger than at first believed. They are of the same insurgent forces that have been operating in Northwestern Nicaragua under Sandino, Blandon and Pedron. These forces apparently are moving in large bodies across Northern Nicaragua converging on Puerta Cabezas.

Landing of Forces Ordered.

The State Department announced orders had been dispatched to the commander of the Asheville to land forces to protect the American citizens at Puerta Cabezas.

Dispatches to the Navy Department show a confused military situation around Puerta Cabezas with insurgent bands already between the city and National Guard patrols under American Marine officers. In the city itself only one marine officer and a few Guardia enlisted men remained. Otherwise, until the Asheville's force is landed the city's only protection is an untrustworthy native civil guard.

The Guardia forces under marine officers, usually based at Puerta Cabezas, were reported operating in small groups in the territory northwest of the port. One patrol under Lieut. Clyde Roy Darrah was reported near Logtown, 78 kilometers northwest of Puerta Cabezas.

Lieutenant Reported Safe.

Reports that Lieut. Waddell had been killed were discounted after a later report that he had been in tele- phone communication with Capt. Wood, leading another Guardia patrol to his relief.

Marine airplanes from Managua flew over the Logtown district yesterday afternoon and reported the Darrah patrol holding out at Moss Farm, near Logtown. The bridges at that point had been burned. The aviators saw only a few of the enemy.

Reinforcements of the Guardia, under Marine officers, were moving eastward toward Puerta Cabezas along the Coco River, but it was estimated another 24 hours would be required for their arrival.

Meanwhile Indians also were moving down the Pis Pis River. Commander W. W. Waddell is in charge of the Asheville.

The State Department announced the Asheville's landing force would remain ashore only until the Guardia, with the aid of reinforcements, could assure protection of Puerta Cabezas. Immediately thereafter, it was stated, the Asheville's men would be withdrawn aboard the ship.

Meanwhile, arrangements were being made to evacuate such American citizens as wished to leave on board the steamer Catalina and on the Asheville.

Request for Protection.

Landing of the Asheville's force was partly in response to requests by representatives of the Standard Fruit and Steamship Co. at Washington for protection.

The commander of the marine second brigade at Managua relayed to Washington a report that a Moravian missionary named Brignza, presumably an American, had been killed by insurgents.

A member of the guardia captured by the insurgents on Monday escaped later when marine airplanes bombed the insurgent

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, April 14.—Seven firemen and nine workmen emerged alive at 9 a. m. today from a blazing sanitary district tunnel on the West Side in which 11 men were killed during the night.

Led by Division Fire Marshal Patrick Pierce, the survivors crawled unaided to the surface through the shaft that brought death to the seven workers and four firemen trapped in lethal gas and heat. They had saved their lives through 14 hours' imprisonment by sealing themselves in safety air chambers at one end of the new sewage disposal tunnel.

The body of Fire Captain James F. O'Neill, eleventh victim of the fire, was removed through a hole bored in the street at 1:20 p. m. today. He had not returned to the surface after leading the first rescue squad into the tunnel last night.

Heat that melted the rubber suit of a diver and fumes that choked and blinded the rescue squads had forestalled thorough search of the bore until a new smoke-ejecting device rushed here from Kenosha, Wis., was applied to the air shaft.

28 Already in Hospital.

The double-barreled pipes sucked the smoke from the chamber 50 feet underground and forced compressed air down, clearing a path to safety for the entombed men. Once on the surface, they were taken to St. Anthony's Hospital where 28 firemen already were patients, suffering from injuries and the effects of gas.

The smoke ejector is the invention of Peter T. Pirsch, a Kenosha contractor, who hastened to complete his first model at 3 a. m. today and speeded its delivery to give it time to make its first test. Billows of smoke poured from the tunnel mouth as the pumps began functioning and fresh, cool air was driven into the flaming tube.

It was a dramatic moment as the little group rose to the street. Firemen were pumping, watching the shaft opening tensely, ready to attack any fire that reached the surface and threatened the sheds at the mouth. Suddenly the elevator bell rang, the cage ran up and grimy faces appeared.

A tremendous shout went up, and firemen and rescuers rushed to the entrance of the pit. Again the cage dropped, brought up another load, then a third to bring a total of 22 hours and 57 minutes.

For the next few months, postal officials said, passengers will not be carried over that portion of the route requiring night flying. The cut in flying time is said to have been made possible by use of planes capable of maintaining an average speed of 140 miles an hour from Kansas City to Los Angeles.

ALFONSO'S TROUBLES DATE FROM END OF SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR

KINGS OF EIGHT LARGE COUNTRIES FELL IN 21 YEARS

Beginning With Portugal in 1910 Nations With 700,000,000 Population Have Deposed Monarchs.

RUSSIA, GERMANY, CHINA, LARGEST

Austro-Hungary, Greece and Turkey Are the Others Before Spain to Oust Royalty.

Before the overthrow of King Alfonso XIII of Spain today, seven major countries in which live almost 700,000,000 persons, have seen their crowns swept aside in the last 21 years, with various forms of governments being set up in place of monarchies. They are Russia, Germany, Austro-Hungary, China, Portugal, Greece and Turkey.

Portugal's last monarch was Manuel II of the house of Braganza-Coburg, who succeeded to the throne at the age of 10 after his father in 1908. After a short revolution, a republic was established on Oct. 5, 1910, with Dr. Theophilo Braga as provisional President. The present head of the Government is Gen. Oscar Carmona.

China, which was one of the oldest monarchies in the world, adopted a republican Constitution in 1912. The last Emperor was Puyi, whose family, styled Ta Ching Chao (Great Pure dynasty), was of Manchu origin and dated from 1644. After a revolution the boy-Emperor abdicated Feb. 12, 1912, although retaining the title of Emperor of the Manchu imperial house until 1924, when it was abolished. The present head is Ching Kai-shik.

Three Crowns Fall in War.

The World War saw three crowns topple. The first was that of Russia, with the abdication of Nicholas II after a revolution broke out on March 12, 1917. Later the Czar, who was of the Romanoff family, and his wife and children were executed while prisoners. A republican government was established which became the present Union of Socialist Soviet Republics.

The Austro-Hungary empire was next split up, a republic being proclaimed in Austria Nov. 12, 1918, and Hungary being proclaimed an independent democratic state. Emperor Charles, of Habsburg, gave up the throne after a revolution in Hungary. The present regent of Hungary is Nicholas Horthy de Nagybanya and Austria's President is Dr. Wilhelm Miklas. Hungary, however, is still a monarchy in form, though no King has been selected.

Wilhelm II, the last of the Hohenzollerns, abdicated as Emperor of the Germans on Nov. 9, 1918, two days before the end of the World War, after a revolution broke out in Germany. He fled to Holland, where he still is an exile at Doorn. His departure was followed by establishment of a republic with Friedrich Ebert as first President. Gen. Paul von Hindenburg, Germany's World War leader, is present head of the Government.

Passing of the Sultans.

Turkey was next to undergo a change, with the passing of the last Sultan, Mohammed VI. On Nov. 1, 1922, the Grand National Assembly declared the office of Sultan had ceased to exist, and three days later the administration of Constantinople (now Istanbul) passed into the hands of the Angora Government. On Oct. 29, 1922, the Nationalist leader Ghazi Mustapha Kemal Pasha, was elected first President, and the next year the Turkish Caliphate was abolished and all members of the House of Osman were exiled and deprived of Turkish citizenship. Mustapha Kemal Pasha is still President.

Turkey was the last of the seven to give up the crown, a republic being established by a plebiscite on April 12, 1924. Georges II was the last of the Kings, but he had been forced into exile the previous December. The President of the Republic of Greece is Alexander Zaimis.

camp at Moss Farm, near Loxartown. He reported the insurgent leader, Blandon, was there with about 60 men, all armed with rifles, with bandoliers of ammunition, one 37-millimeter gun and two Lewis machine guns. He quoted Blandon as saying 350 more men were moving eastward to join in the attack on Puerto Cabezas.

The navy yesterday ordered the coast guard to go from Guanacaste, Cuba, to the troubled zone, but these instructions were countermanded shortly after the 300-weight anchor, Secretary of Navy Adams said at that time the cruiser would not proceed to Nicaragua unless further trouble developed.

onstrators seriously injured ten persons, and less seriously injured 30.

During the night the Cabinet of Prime Minister Aznar decided to resign, and recommended that Don Juan de la Cerva, Minister of Public Works and father of the inventor of the autogiro, form a new conservative monarchist government.

After he signed his abdication at 6 o'clock, Alfonso left the Cabinet room and embraced his ministers with considerable emotion.

He said that he left the throne with his conscience tranquil, having always worked for the welfare of the country.

"I am leaving," the King was quoted as saying, "because it is the will of the people of Spain and I wish to avoid bloodshed. My conscience is clear. I have tried to do my duty and be just."

Martial Law Declared.

Martial law was declared at 7:15 tonight by the retired Aznar Government to preserve order until the Republican Government could begin to function later in the night.

The ministers of the provisional government were officially invested at 6:45 tonight and went immediately to their respective offices.

As news that the republic had been established spread through the city vast throngs of people left their work, joining the huge crowds on the streets, carrying banners and parading while the police and civil guards stood by.

The crowds deserted taxicabs and trucks which were filled with persons draped with red or Republican banners. In the Puerta del Sol the traffic resembled a metropolitan after-theater jam which the police were helpless to straighten out.

Republic's First Cabinet.

The following tentative Cabinet of the new Government was announced this afternoon with the exception of: Niceto Alcalá Zamora, President; Miguel Maestre, Minister of Interior; Indalecio Prieto, Finance; Alvaro Albornoz, Justice; Alejandro Lerroux, Foreign Affairs; Manuel Azaña, War; Marcelino Domingo, Labor; Francisco Largo Caballero, Public Works; Fernando de los Rios, Instruction; Casares Gil,

RALPH CAPONE IS FREED

CHICAGO, April 14.—Ralph Capone followed his brother, Admiral Juan Bautista, Aznar resigned this forenoon with advice to the King to call in three leaders who have demanded a constitutional convention which would determine whether Spain remains a monarchy or becomes a republic.

Almost at the same time leaders of the Republicans issued an ultimatum demanding that the King declare a republic, and virtually proclaiming one to exist already as a consequence of Sunday's voting.

The Republican leaders announced the establishment of a revolutionary Junta in Madrid to "defend until the final and vital one of its actuality or we are all again jailed."

The manifesto was interpreted generally as calling for a showdown with the Government.

Upon departure of Premier Aznar from the Royal palace the King, at his advice, summoned Jose Antonio Sanchez Guerra, Jose Francisco Bergamin, and Miguel Villanueva Gomez, withholding his acceptance of the Minister's resignation until after he had conferred with them.

All these events took place in the midst of considerable popular excitement. In everything except official proclamation Madrid appeared to be a city under martial law.

the dictatorship of Primo de Rivera.

An open car through the streets of Madrid. The crowds cheered that display of courage until they were beaten. The scene was repeated the next day and the day after that when the King again rode, unattended, through the street, defying the enemies of the throne to do their worst.

The church ceremony preceding this attack was a state affair of medieval grandeur attended by royalty from all parts of Europe and by representatives of all other governments with which Spain had relations. The Prince of Wales, who became George V of England; Prince Henry of Prussia and Grand Duke Michael of Russia were among the guests.

The bomb thrower was Mateo Moreno. He was pursued and cornered in a village near Madrid. He shot and killed a policeman who tried to arrest him, then blew out his own brains.

Again in January, 1904, a live bomb was found under the walls of the palace. When told about this religious dispute simmered down. It had been practically forgotten by 1925, when King Alfonso, who was always personally a devout Catholic, visited Rome and read to the Pope a message of filial adhesion.

In these years, too, the Moroccan question caused much trouble.

Revolts of the tribes brought several humiliating defeats to Spanish arms and territorial limits were disputed with France and Germany.

Marriage "a Love Match."

The marriage of Alfonso and Princess Victoria was always described as a love match, however appropriate it may have been from a state viewpoint. The English princess quickly became a popular queen. Four sons and two daughters were born to them. The heir apparent, Alfonso, Prince of the Asturias, was born May 10, 1907. Prince Jaime was born June 23, 1908; Princess Beatrice June 22, 1909; Princess Maria Christina, Dec. 12, 1911; Prince Juan, June 20, 1913, and Prince Gonzalo on Oct. 24, 1914.

After the assassination and revolution without, Alfonso was credited with making a real family life within the residential sections of the palace. He always gave a part of every day to the children, playing, working or studying with them and always keeping an eye on their training. As much simplicity as the royal station permitted was the family rule.

Busy Throughout Reign.

But he was a busy king throughout his reign. He came to the throne soon after Spain had lost her last American possessions and the Philippines and Guam in the Pacific by the rebellion in Cuba and the war of 1898 with the United States. The $20,000,000 which went to Spain as recompense was only a drop in the bucket of economic totals that resulted from the reduced trade and governmental revenue.

The orders are designed to further the execution of the Russian five-year plan and will help to improve the employment situation in Germany.

BOSTON, April 14.—At least 12 persons were injured, one seriously, and as many more shaken up today as the train which had been delayed in the Park Street subway station.

Ambulances were sent to the scene and the station, which is directly under Boston Common, was closed temporarily.

RALPH CAPONE IS FREED

CHICAGO, April 14.—Ralph Capone followed his brother, Admiral Juan Bautista, Aznar resigned this forenoon with advice to the King to call in three leaders who have demanded a constitutional convention which would determine whether Spain remains a monarchy or becomes a republic.

Almost at the same time leaders of the Republicans issued an ultimatum demanding that the King declare a republic, and virtually proclaiming one to exist already as a consequence of Sunday's voting.

In that time Spain was outwardly tranquil for the most part but, as events proved, it was only repressed. When Primo, early in 1930, appealed over the head of the King to the Cortes for a vote of no confidence, and for decision as to whether the dictatorship should continue, the monarch withdrew his favor. The dictator resigned and died a few months later in Paris.

Gen. Berenguer as Premier.

Gen. Dámaso Berenguer, who succeeded to the nominal premiership, took the lid off by restoring freedom of speech and lightening censorship of the press. Republican and other liberal leaders who had been exiled since 1923 came back and a flood of agitation against monarchical institutions was released. Strikes, student agitations and similar demonstrations flared up and in December, 1930, there was an open attempt at revolution.

It centered at Jaca, near the French frontier, where it was sprung from the royal stables and played bullfighting with a young calf—the amusement of the attendants and the indignation of his mother.

Alonso began to take a hand in politics and veered toward liberalism from the clericalism and conservatism that marked the early years of his reign. A law legalizing civil marriage started a bitter controversy with the Roman Catholic Church and it was accentuated by a later pronouncement giving literal interpretation to a clause in the Constitution guaranteeing full liberty of conscience. Eventually this religious dispute simmered down. It had been practically forgotten by 1925, when King Alfonso, who was always personally a devout Catholic, visited Rome and read to the Pope a message of filial adhesion.

In those years, too, the Moroccan question caused much trouble. Revolts of the tribes brought several humiliating defeats to Spanish arms and territorial limits were disputed with France and Germany.

Offered Yachting Cup.

Alfonso was devoted to yachting and did most to develop the regattas at San Sebastian and Santander which attracted yachtsmen from the United States, England and Spanish-American countries.

He was a skilled sailor and often sailed through third parties in London. He also operated at times in Wall street, but always sub rosa. Those acquainted with his aptitude for finance said that had he not been born a King he would have won a high position in business.

He worked hard and played hard and always insisted on getting some sort of physical exercise every day—it nothing more than setting up exercises in his room. When a small boy he learned the Basque super-handball game, pelota, one of the most strenuous sports known, but in later years abandoned it and went in for polo, tennis, yachting, shooting, swimming. He played golf, but it was not strenuous enough to interest him very much.

He always wanted to fly, but that was one of his few thwarted ambitions. His counselors insisted it was too dangerous for a King. He had his way about most things, but not this, and only a few times was able to go up as a passenger. Alfonso was fond of dancing and on his visits to London and Paris, which he usually made once or twice a year, was accustomed to learn the latest steps. He thoroughly enjoyed bullfights and on the first Sunday after his wedding he and his bride attended a gallo night in the great Madrid ring.

Adventures as Bullfighter.

Once as a child he slipped off to the royal stables and played bullfighting with a young calf—to the amusement of the attendants and the indignation of his mother.

And one time as a man he faced a real bull and found himself in a very dangerous situation. He was visiting one of the great ranches where the fighting bulls are trained for the ring. The bulls were being tried on in the private ranch ring. After watching the play, the King leaped into the ring waving his cloak and planning to dodge the horns of the charge beast. He did the first time by an inch. The animal wheeled, bit, lowered and with lowered head was upon the King again. A rifle cracked and the bull fell, a bullet in his brain, almost at the King's feet.

The trainer whose marksmanship saved the King, wore afterward a very fine diamond ring.

Motoring was a favorite sport of Alfonso and he had a mania for speed. He was an exceedingly skillful driver but his daring sometimes frightened his associates. He had seven palaces and at times 40 of the finest and fastest cars to be bought and he loved to drive them to the breakneck clip.

This passion for speed made him a good roads advocate and during the De Rivera dictatorship he saw realized a project he had worked on for a long time, a first class system of modern highways over much of Spain.

Once he was driving at 60 miles an hour when he was halted by a new rural traffic policeman. The officer said:

"You mustn't drive so fast. Only the King can do that on this road."

"I'm the King," said Alfonso, smiling.

"That's funny," said the officer. "There are seven other Kings up at the police station, where you are going with me, and they all were driving just as fast as you were."

IN CEMENT SUIT

Missouri Portland Co. is Defendant in Action Filed by Kansas City Concern.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 14.—Alleging that it was forced to use price discriminations by the unfair trade practices of the Missouri Portland Cement Co. of St. Louis, the Consumers' Material Corporation of Kansas City yesterday sued the Missouri Portland Co. for $1,151,000 in Federal Court.

The Consumers' corporation, operated on a rental basis by the Stewart Sand and Material Co. since January, 1930, charged that during the three preceding years the Missouri Portland company sought to eliminate the Consumers' corporation from the crushed stone business by violating the provisions of the Clayton Act.

The Missouri Portland company, it was alleged, persuaded Consumers' customers to break contracts and purchase stone instead from the Missouri Portland company at lower prices. Specific instances were cited with estimates of potential profit lost. Depreciation resulting from the suspension of plants of the Consumers' corporation is estimated at $500,000.

The suit was brought under the terms of the Clayton act, which provides that the amount of damages awarded by the court be trebled by the court. Counsel for the Consumers' corporation said a maximum award, trebled to total $3,455,400, would be "very satisfactory."

The Consumers' corporation, of which R. Newton McDowell is president, was organized several years ago by the merger of 17 crushed stone plants in Western Missouri and Eastern Kansas. The Missouri Portland company produces crushed stone as a by-product.

Charles M. Polk, counsel for the Missouri Portland Cement Co., said today the suit was without merit and the allegations untrue. "This suit has been threatened for about 10 months," Polk said. "In that time the charges made have been carefully investigated both by officials of the company and counsel in Kansas City and St. Louis. The statements in the petition are untrue and the suit is without foundation."

The Missouri Portland Co. has general offices in the Telephone Building.

BELGIAN KING 56 YEARS OLD

He Celebrates Birthday Nearly a Week After the Event.

BRUSSELS, April 14.—King Albert today celebrated his fifty-sixth birthday. Attended by his Minister and military attaches accredited to Brussels, the King reviewed the garrison troops.

His birthday fell on last Wednesday, but the celebration in the royal household and in Brussels was deferred until today.

INCREASE IN DRY LAW ARRESTS AND SEIZURES

Director Woodcock Says March Was "Best Month" Since He Took Office.

By the Associated Press WASHINGTON, April 14.—A new high mark in Federal prohibition enforcement, with more arrests and more automobiles seized than in any other similar period since last July, was announced today by Prohibition Director Woodcock for the month of March.

With his field forces strengthened by approximately 200 new agents, Woodcock said the last month was "the best month the bureau has had since I took office nearly a year ago."

There were 5273 dry law arrests during March, the Prohibition Director said, as contrasted with 4181 for February. At the same time, he said, the seizure of automobiles jumped by 175 to a total of 719 for the month, and the granting of permanent injunctions increased 100, to 534.

"Notwithstanding this increased activity," he continued, "the courts more than kept up with us. There were only 22,583 cases on the docket at the end of February and only 21,000 on April 1."

Jail Sentences Longer.

"Further, we have established a definite trend in these figures, showing that the average of fines is steadily decreasing, while the average of jail sentences has been steadily increasing in the nine months since prohibition enforcement was transferred from the Treasury to the Justice Department."

Meantime, Woodcock pushed plans for the assimilation into the Federal dry force of the rest of 500 new agents authorized by the last Congress. On July 1 they will begin a two-weeks' intensive training period in the 12 prohibition districts.

The Prohibition Bureau's 34 instructors will be called to Washington during June for a "refreshing" course, with orders to have the approximately 200 recruits ready for service by July 15.

Woodcock plans an inspection trip through eight Northwestern states, leaving the capital this week.

Sentences of Liquor and Beer.

In figures made public by the Prohibition Bureau today it was shown that agents seized 192,195 gallons of beer during March, together with 147,688 gallons of illicit liquor. During the same period 1752 stills and distilleries fell into Federal hands, while 2385 beer fermenters suffered a similar fate.

Since Woodcock took office last July the figures showed 25,912 fines, aggregating $3,632,099, have been assessed against prohibition violators, while 19,464 persons have received jail sentences totaling 11,736 years.

BIRTH CONTROL NOT CHURCH MATTER, M. E. BISHOP SAYS

Ainsworth of Southern Branch Declares Federal Council Stand Is Not Representative.

By the Associated Press BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 14.—Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, president of the College of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in a statement criticizes the committee representing the Council of Churches of Christ in America for its recent action on the subject of birth control.

"I wish to register my protest against the impropriety of the recent publication of the committee on the subject," he said. "This committee represents nobody but itself, and it certainly does not represent the Methodist Church."

"However undesirable it is for children to be born in excessive numbers in families that are unprepared to nurture and care for them, this is not a matter for the paternal intervention of the church.

"Such officious intrusion into the sacred realm of the home is dangerous in the extreme and in the end will promote more promiscuous sexual relations. It is blasting at the foundations of the home which is the bulwark of civilization and society, whether it is so intended or not."

By the Associated Press NEW YORK, April 14.—The New York conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church at the concluding session of its annual meeting in Brooklyn yesterday adopted a resolution recommending "such legislation as shall permit physicians to render needed information on the subject of birth control."

Entire Estate of Michael Friedsam Exceeds $750,000.

By the Associated Press NEW YORK, April 14.—The will of Michael Friedsam, head of B. Altman & Co., filed yesterday, provides that his entire estate, with the exception of specific bequests approximating $750,000, be devoted to charity. The size of the estate was not estimated in the petition for probate, but it is expected to run into millions.

Six charities are mentioned for bequests of $20,000 each, but the trustees have the power under certain conditions to select the recipients of the residue of the estate. The Friedsam art collection is left to the Metropolitan Museum of Art with the provision that it keep intact. Mrs. Alice G. Scherzer, daughter of Friedsam's late sister, is entitled to $250,000 and smaller amounts are provided for additional relatives, employees and others.

YOUR Individual BEAUTY*

YOUR figure contains the elements of grace and loveliness . . . it only needs the gentle persuasion of a property designed foundation garment.

CHARIS will help you discover the individual beauty of your figure—because it is adjustable to individual needs. Imperfections of line and contour, ungraceful proportions—these difficult obstacles to beauty will be transformed as soon as you begin to wear CHARIS.

No other foundation garment can give you the same personal help that CHARIS does. Its adjustable features are patented and can't be copied.

May we show you—without obligation—just what this inexpensive, personal foundation garment will do for your figure? An authorized CHARIS representative will call at your home whenever convenient.
She will explain all the important exclusive features of CHARIS, including the expert fitting service for which our customers pay nothing.

by "VALUE"

GOOD values in merchandise, we think, are not concerned with Price alone. Price is only one consideration. Value is the full equivalent of the price you pay.

One article may be poor value at a dime, and another, good value at a dollar. That depends on the purpose for which you buy it, and the service you want it to give. Style may be a factor; timeliness affects values; market conditions, too, influence the return you get for your money.

Nugents idea of Value is honestly-made, reliable merchandise, satisfactory for the purpose intended, at the lowest price the market affords. Our buyers are exacting. They buy closely because we sell closely. And they never forget that the retail customers' satisfaction is the most important thing of all.

Wholesale markets today favor the buyer. Every dollar now buys from ten to forty cents' worth more than it did a year or two ago, particularly on large purchases. Nugents has bought heavily at today's low prices—more liberally, in proportion, than other St. Louis stores. The results are passed on to you in better values for your money. The stocks are new, fresh, complete. They represent today's best values. Come in and see for yourself!

Dry Repeal Bill in Alaska
By the Associated Press.
JUNEAU, Alaska, April 14.—A bill to repeal the Alaska dry law was introduced in the House of the Territorial Legislature yesterday by Representatives Allyn and Heierich of Nome.

CANADIAN PREMIER'S SISTER AND MINISTER TO U. S. WED

Miss Muriel M. Bennett, sister of Premier R. B. Bennett, and Major William Duncan Herridge, Canadian Minister to the United States, were married today in Chalmers United Church. The Governor-General and Countess Bessborough were the only guests present aside from members of the two families.

The bride was given away by Premier Bennett in a church decorated with ferns that banked the communion table and pulpit stairways and Easter lilies in tall golden standards. The Rev. Dr. John W. Woodside read the service. The bride was unattended. She wore a wedding gown of summer cloud blue bouffé de soie with fitted silhouette, which spread in a long flounced ending in two small trains.

For many years Miss Bennett was an inseparable companion of her brother. During the last political campaign she accompanied him across the country, frequently speaking for him. Before his appointment to Washington, Maj. Herridge, internationally known as a patent and corporation lawyer, was a confidential adviser to the Prime Minister. He won the distinguished service order and the military cross with bar in the war. Maj. and Mrs. Herridge will spend their wedding trip in England and Denmark.

SWINDLER OF JOBLESS MEN GETS SIX-MONTH SENTENCE

Fabian Thompson Said to Have Obtained $6000 by Promising to Find Work for Unemployed.

Fabian Thompson, said by police to have admitted swindling unemployed persons of $6000, was sentenced to six months in the workhouse and fined $200 today by Judge Butler in Court of Criminal Correction for obtaining money by false pretenses. Thompson pleaded not guilty, but offered no defense.

He was arrested Feb. 27 through a trap set by Riley Crow, who had given him $15 in return for promise of a job as a janitor. When Thompson did not return, Crow persuaded a friend to advertise for work as a janitor and Thompson was arrested when he appeared at the friend's home.

EMPLOYEE OF CLOSED BANK RECEIVES FOUR-YEAR TERM

J. E. Malloy, Who Said Robbers Kidnapped Him, Sentenced in Chicago for False Entries.

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, April 14.—John J. Malloy, 22 years old, former assistant cashier of the Lawrence Avenue National Bank, was sentenced to four years in Leavenworth Penitentiary and fined $5000 by Federal Judge Fred L. Wham today for making false entries with fraudulent intent.

The bank has been closed since the discovery of defalcations estimated at $60,000. Malloy was acquitted of embezzlement and of conspiring to rob the bank on New Year's day. The looting of safety deposit boxes and vaults on that holiday caused an examination of the bank and the discovery of false entries and alleged shortages. Malloy, Jr., Milwaukee, telephoned police to report he had been tricked by a gang of robbers and forced to admit them to the bank and then taken by them to Milwaukee.

HOSIERY MILL JOBS TO 5000

Philadelphia Factories, Scene of Strike, to Reopen Full Time.

By the Associated Press.
PHILADELPHIA, April 14. Hosiery mills, closed or running part time during the strike which has been in progress here, will reopen full time tomorrow, offering jobs to 5000 skilled workers, a group of factory owners announced yesterday at a Chamber of Commerce luncheon.

The mills will offer their old employees their former jobs at old wages and working conditions. If the strikers persist in remaining out, other hosiery hands will be employed. The American Federation of Full Fashion Hosiery Workers answered the employers' announcement with a threat of continuing the strike unless the mills make better terms. Officers of the organization asserted the mills would not have enough workers to run them when they open tomorrow.

BLOODHOUNDS FIND LOST GIRL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CLARKSVILLE, Mo., April 14.—Ida, the 10-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Upthegrove, who disappeared when her mother sent her to the barn to get chicken feed, was found by bloodhounds in a nearby clubhouse which had been closed.

The dogs followed a trail through a wheat field and up to a broken window of the clubhouse. The girl was found asleep inside.

Burglar in Coolidge's Office.

By the Associated Press.

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., April 14.—The law office of Calvin Coolidge was entered by a burglar Saturday night, police said today. Although nothing was known to have been stolen from the former President's office, $30 was obtained from the safe of his former law partner, Ralph W. Hemstrey.

Heavy Fall of Hail at Sedalia.

By the Associated Press.

SEDALIA, Mo., April 14.—A heavy fall of hail here this afternoon was thought to have damaged fruit trees, which are in bloom. Hail and rain fell for 15 minutes. Peach and pear trees are in full bloom.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

YOUNG GIANT DEFIES COURT

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., April 14.—Harry F. Sadikoff said today the Superior Court would be asked to aid a father controlling a 14-year-old son, six feet tall and weighing 225 pounds, who objects to medical treatments designed to check further growth. Sadikoff, attorney for Dr. Adolph Roome, the father, said the boy, Adolph Roome Jr., had defied a court order to submit to the treatments because they made him "feel bad." In a divorce case ruling the boy was placed in his mother's care, and recently the father was awarded his custody for medical attention. Dr. Roome said the boy refused to leave his mother's house Sunday.

When You

CAN'T QUIT

Fatigue is the signal to rest. Obey it if you can. When you can't, keep cool and carry-on in comfort.

Bayer Aspirin was meant for just such times, for it insures your comfort. Freedom from those pains that nag at nerves and wear you down. One tablet relieves and strengthens headache while it is still just a threat. Take two or three tablets when you've caught a cold, and that's usually the end of it.

Carry Bayer Aspirin when you travel. Have some at home and keep some in the office. Like an efficient secretary, it will often "save the day" and spare you many uncomfortable, unproductive hours. Perfectly harmless, so keep it handy, keep it in mind, and use it. No man of affairs can afford to ignore the score and more of uses explained in the proven directions. From a grumbling tooth to those rheumatic pains which seem almost to bend the bones. Bayer Aspirin is ready with its quick relief—and always works. Neuralgia. Neuritis. Any nagging, needless pain.

Get the genuine tablets, stamped with the Bayer cross. They are of perfect purity, absolute uniformity, and have the same action every time. Why experiment with imitations costing a few cents less? The saving is too little. There is too much at stake. But there is economy in the purchase of genuine Bayer Aspirin tablets in the large bottles.

EQUIPOISE, UNDER RESTRAINT, WINS IN FIRST 1931 START

WHITNEY CRACK CLOSE TO TRACK RECORD FOR SIX FURLONG SPRINT

In the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, April 14.—Equipoise, leading money winning jockey in 1929, made an impressive start in a campaign designed to win six-year-old laurels this season.

The C. V. Whitney thoroughbred, whose book favorite to win the Kentucky Derby, made his first start as a two-year-old at Havre de

WIRAY'S COLUMN

Bill Killefer's "Hopes."

BILL KILLEFER and his future is being viewed rather pitifully by his friends in the baseball world today as he leads his revamped band of Browns into the American League's marathon.

"Even a miracle-man couldn't be expected to get very far with a team in which so many youngsters and minor leaguers must make good," is the cynical verdict.

But there is another side to the shield and it reads more favorably to Killefer's outlook: While Killefer's team has a large proportion of comparatively inexperienced youth, it also has plenty of pep and ambition—which was lacking last year. It will make good or go down trying hard all the time. A fighting team is always interesting.

Bonus Plan on Trial. THEN again there is the "bonus contract" plan under which the Browns are working. Practically every man on the club has an incentive to excel—task like a real champion. Under the guidance of Arthur (Slim) Robertson, he took command at the half-mile pole and at the end of the journey was under a strong pull. Not once during the trip did Robertson let the coil loose. Had he been forced, the long striding of the sprinter-Swinging probably would have equaled or bettered the record of 1:11.

Although only five faced the gun, the getaway was poor, Panetian pushed to the front with Equipoise in second place and Dark Fire away lengths back of the field. Panetian showed an excellent turn of early speed, but once Robertson gave Equipoise the word, the race was over. All through the final furlong, Robertson looked back at his field as his mount gallantly galloped past the judges' stand.

The large Charity day crowd, remembering Equipoise's great 2-year-old record, backed him down and he returned only $2.50 for a a ticket.

A. U. TO REINSTATE VALLEY CLUBS IF THEY AGREE TO ALL RULES

one of rumors which have been going around relative to his actions in office, one pertaining to a report that he had bought a watch from a boxer after he had won it as prize, and another that he had made money off expenses on trips he had made conducting boxers to out-of-town tournaments.

Probst declared that he did not buy the watch in question, but had accepted it as security for a loan. He asserted that he had spent considerable money of his own when managing boxers in tournaments, including money which he paid out, he said, "buying strawberries for our boxers in winter times."

A. U. May Sponsor Boxing Shows

The board realizes that it cannot afford to offend the A. A. U. unless some combination can be made for them and a few boxing sides have been held here under A. A. U. auspices during the past year.

Probst was instructed to meet with Earl Bowley, manager of the Winter Garden Amusement Co., relative to a proposal from Reiter that the A. A. U. hold amateur boxing shows at the Winter Garden.

It was pointed out that most of the clubs in the Mississippi Valley were promoting boxing for profit and the board condemned that practice.

Those attending last night's meeting of the board were Robert L. Green, president Western A. A. U.; Harry Keeler, Ben Blanks, Missouri State Association; Nathan Sutz, Y. M. H. A.; Ben Keeler, Jewish Community Center; Charles Gubler, Concordia Gymnastic Society; C. H. Nevels, Y. M. C. A.; Tom Hanley, Greater St. Louis-Basball League; Harry Riddick, Headlight A. C.; Charles Reber, Louisville-Basball Basketball Club; Charles Anderson, Kingdom House; T. Forsyth, former W. A. A. U.; Hans Wulff, Fred Wack, Harry Levinson, delegates at large.

BRIDGEPORT TO HOLD DISTRICT NET TOURNEY

Local to the Post-Dispatch.

BRIDGEPORT, Ill., April 14.—District division of the Illinois High School division tournament will be played on the local courts May 2, and it is probable that a district net tournament may be held here on the same day.

This is the second year such tournaments have been held. The ten matches will be in charge of Coach Cleve Smith and their partners, if played here, will be managed by C. E. Kirk of the high school faculty.

Cleveland Juniors Win.

FREEMAN RULES AS FAVORITE TO BEAT THOMPSON IN TITLE FIGHT

HOW BOXERS COMPARE

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, April 14.—This is how young Jack Thompson and Tommy Freeman, fighting for the welterweight championship here tonight, compare:

FRANKMAN.	THOMPSON.
Age	24
Height	5'4 1/2
Reach	70
Weight	145
Chest (normal)	35
Waist	32 1/2
Forearm	29 1/2
Hip	37
Biceps	11 1/2
Calf	13 1/2
Ankle	9 1/2

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, April 14.—Tommy Freeman, welterweight champion of the world, will risk his title in a 15-round battle tonight against the youngster from whom he won it here six months ago—Young Jack Thompson, Oakland, Cal., Negro.

It will be Freeman's first defense of his crown. He was favored in the wagering today to retain it although Thompson is positive he will win back the crown by knocking out Freeman within five rounds.

Freeman, however, is just as confident of victory, declaring that he had defeated Thompson twice, and that tonight he certainly would give him something to remember. He plans to concentrate his attack on the body to slow the speedy sharpshooting Negro down. It was this attack that enabled Freeman to defeat Thompson for the title here last September 5.

Prospects today were that 10,000 or 11,000 spectators will witness the match with gate receipts at $25,000. Freeman will receive 50 per cent of the gate with Thompson getting 10 per cent.

Neither Freeman nor Thompson had any difficulty in making the required weight, 147 pounds. Both were under this notch when they weighed in at noon today. Freeman scaled 146½ and Thompson 145½.

The championship battle will be supported by an attractive preliminary card. In the semifinal of 10 rounds are two heavyweights, Alverton Wrights, Gorilla Jones of Akron, and Paul Pirrone, a Cleveland prospect. Tommy Grogan of Omaha, and Joey Goodman of Cleveland, junior welterweights, are paired for 10 rounds ahead of Jones and Pirrone.

$395 GROCERY HOLDUP;
20 POLICEMEN TOO LATE

Officers, Gathering for Roll
Call, Answer Alarm, but Negro Robber Had Fled.

Two holdups with deadly weapons were reported to police today and yesterday.

Jacob Polinski, proprietor of a grocery at 2812 Market street, planned to take $395 from his safe after the store was opened and locked him in a rear-garage.

Another Negro passing the store noticed the holdup and ran a block to the Laclede Avenue Police Station. Twenty policemen, answering for roll call, went to the store but the robber was gone.

They released the proprietor.

Eight customers and Harry Herman, proprietor of a pool room at 111 Eastgate avenue, were lined up against the wall by two men who took $77. Those reporting losses were: Herman, $45; Paul

Engel, 111 Pershing avenue, $25;

John Dalton, 5612 Clay avenue,

James Graynor, 5322 Vernon avenue, $1.

The real estate office of John

C. Greulich, 3111 North Grand boulevard, was held up for $5 by a robber who threatened Greulich, the cashier and three customers.

Mrs. Hattie Reece of Festus, Mo.,

was robbed of $5 by a Negro, who seized her purse at the entrance to an alley near Delmar boulevard and Vandeventer avenue last night.

The robber fled. Mrs. Reece is Henrietta Jasino, 2725 Duane street, reported her purse containing $1.50 was taken from her purse while she was attending services at St. Augustine's Catholic Church, Lamore and Hebert streets.

Jewelry and clothing valued at $250 were taken from the apartment of Dr. Howard Kohde, 615

Clara avenue.

Awakened by a noise, Mr. and

Mrs. Arthur Hawkins, 2225 Park avenue, saw a burglar climb out a rear window. A purse containing $2 was missing.

Arthur Herman, amateur aviator, reported to police that two airplane magnetos and a number of tools for aircraft engines, valued at $356, were stolen from a store room at 111 the Independent Quarry,

4920 Highland avenue, operated by his father, G. A. Herman, of Laume

RAID ON GRAPE CONCENTRATE

Plant in New York Invaded by Federal Agents.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 14.—One of the plants of Fruit Industries, Ltd., co-operative grape growers' organization, was raided yesterday by agents of Andrew McCampbell,

Prohibition Administrator, who seized 300 gallons of alleged wine.

Though the raid followed word from Ames W. W. Woodcock, Prohibition Director in Washington,

it is his opinion the sale and advertisement of grape concentrates by their present form were illegal.

McCampbell is discussing the raid with the U. S. attorney's office.

He alleged cruelty and intemper-ence. Mrs. Schmidt regained use of her maiden name, Ruby De-

MODEL SAFETY SYSTEM MAKES USE OF CAMERA

Pictorial Reports Secure Convictions in 90 Pct. of Auto Accidents in Evanston, Ill.

INVENTOR TELLS HOW IT WORKS

Franklin Kreml Addresses Central States Congress —182 Days Without Traffic Fatality.

How trained traffic policemen armed with cameras, tape measures and typewriters investigate accidents and contribute to convictions for traffic violations was described at the Central States Safety Congress today by Franklin Kreml, 28-year-old director of the accident prevention bureau, Evanston, Ill., police department.

The congress, which closes a two-day session today at Hotel Statler under auspices of the St. Louis Safety Council in co-operation with the National Council, is considering methods of promoting safety on the streets, in factories and in homes.

Kreml, who developed a system of accident investigation which has been adopted by Minneapolis, Minn., and is regarded as a model by the national council, described how in Evanston, a city of 60,000 population, which went 182 consecutive days last year without a traffic fatality, especially equipped squad cars go to all major accidents.

Safety Cars Cruise City.

Two cars, each manned by two men, he said, cruise the city, reporting hourly to headquarters. Upon notification of an accident, they go to the scene, take statements from witnesses on the spot, measure the skid marks, photograph them, and make a complete pictorial record of the accident. Except for developing the films, the entire report is completed on the spot, he said.

Since the establishment of this investigative system, about two years ago, he said, convictions have resulted in more than 90 per cent of traffic violation cases. Certainly of conviction, he said, has made motorists cautious, promoting the safety record. A similar plan has been suggested to the St. Louis Police Department by the local Safety Council.

Other speakers at the session, devoted to street and highway safety, included Charles Genter, St. Louis traffic engineer; and Matt Murray, director of public works, Kansas City, Mo. Simultaneous sessions dealt with safety promotion in the petroleum, leather and metal industries.

St. Louis' Problems.

St. Louis traffic accident problems were discussed at a public officials luncheon. Chief of Police Gerk, Police Judge Blaine and Robert E. Brooks, Director of Streets and Sewers, spoke from the viewpoint of their respective offices.

Director Brooks said the death rate from traffic accidents in St. Louis so far this year was 21.7 in the 100,000 population, compared with 22.4 in Cleveland, 23.6 in Detroit, 28.1 in Chicago and 34.6 in Los Angeles. The number of automobiles operating on the city streets was constantly increasing. Last year there were 4,709 more registered here last Feb. 1, an increase of 22.3% in the year. During the last 10 years, the mileage of city streets had increased only 2 per cent, he said, while the number of machines in the city and county had risen 350 per cent.

Assault Curb Parking.
Discussing parking, Brooks declared: "The sooner our property owners and merchants in the congested business district realize that curb parking there must be eliminated for their own good, the sooner we will solve our automobile terminal problem. Without curb parking eliminated in a large measure downtown, traffic signals would hinder transportation facilities."

Brooks repeated his past recommendations for levee district parking between Eads and Municipal bridges and the use of garages and parking lots downtown.

Afternoon sessions include round tables on school safety measures and industrial safety problems. The congress will close tonight with a dinner, addressed by Charles W. Bergquist, president of the national council, and John Temple Graves II of Birmingham, Ala.

The opening day sessions, attended by about 300 delegates from Missouri, Illinois, Indiana and neighboring states, included a home safety session, a public utilities session, and sessions on safety in small plants, construction and other products. The engineering division discussed safety promotion methods last night, giving examples of successful safety conferences.

THREAT OF VETO BY CAULFIELD IN DEMANDING 'FAIR' REDISTRICTING BILL

Governor Virtually Serves
Notice of Such Action in Addressing the Legislature on Party Congressional Representation.

PLEA IGNORED BY HOUSE COMMITTEE

Senate Leaders Say Executive Proposes Partisan Plan—State Senatorial Districting Measure Passes Senate 21-11.

By CURTIS A. BETTS,
Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 14.—Gov. Caulfield, in a special message delivered to the Legislature joint session today, virtually served notice that he would veto the Democratic Congressional redistricting bill if it is passed in the house in the form adopted by the Senate.

Democratic Progress.

The Governor told the Democratic Legislature that the result of the redistricting proposed was to gain Democratic party advantage and that it was not fair and spontaneous in its effect.

"I trust," the Governor said, "that this bill, if enacted into law, will not constitute a fair redistricting of the State. While it does attain a reasonable equality of population among the districts formed by it, it does not provide districts which are compact in territory and it violates most flagrantly the principle that territory, the inhabitants of which have the same common interests, should be joined for the purpose of congressional representation."

He touched upon the possible confusion which would result from a vote of the bill, minimizing the threatened chaos, and, as indicating his intention regarding it, significantly said:

"It is better that our people be disenfranchised for two years or even longer than to be deprived of their right to equal representation in Congress of the United States."

Governor's Decision.

The Governor's decision to attempt to head off the passage of the bill was reached only this morning, though he began the preparation of the message yesterday afternoon that it might be ready in case he decided to deliver it.

As exclusively told in the Post-Dispatch Saturday, he first began serious consideration of a special message Friday, following visits to him by Republican Congressmen who would be placed in Democratic districts by the proposed plan by party leaders and others in the debate on the plan in the Senate. The Democrats had taken the position that the bill would provide for five strong Republican districts, five strong Democratic districts, two close Democratic districts in which Republicans would have a chance to elect a Congressman, and one close Republican district in which the Democrats would have a chance. The Democrats said it was an 8-5 redistricting. The Republicans said it was more nearly 4-4.

Submits New Plan.

The Governor submitted a new districting plan for the consideration of the Legislature, his plan, he said, providing for seven Democratic and six Republican districts. He did this, he said, notwithstanding his opinion that Missouri was a close State with a definite Republican trend.

His proposal changed the north central district from a strong Democratic district to a district which he said had 250 Democratic, or in other words, predominantly Democratic districts formed primarily by Jackson County and Kansas City he left strongly Democratic.

The northeastern district was left heavily Democratic, the west central district heavily Democratic, the district including St. Louis heavily Republican, the southeast district less than 3000 Democratic, the south central made about even politically, and the southwest district he left heavily Republican.

"Partisan and Preposterous."

In two of the Governor's proposed districts, which he classes as Democratic, there are clear Republican majorities in any normal times. He uses as a basis in figuring the political complexion of the districts the average of the majorities in the elections of 1924, 1926, 1928 and 1930, including the Republican landslide election of 1928. On this basis of figuring, he shows one district Democratic by 250 and one by only 15. Of course, both of these are Republican districts. He says his bill creates seven Democratic and six Republican districts. In fact, it created eight Republican and five Democratic districts. In my opinion, there is not a possibility that the Governor's plan could ever form congressional districts which are fair, and as compact and nearly equal in population as may be. The Text of President's Speech Before Pan-American Union

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—The text of President Hoover's speech before the Pan-American Union follows:

I am glad to be your guest at this special session of the governing board of the Pan-American Union which you are holding in honor of Pan-American day. I recently issued a proclamation, calling upon our people to give this day due observance, and this proclamation has received general approval throughout the country. Exercises are being held at this time in public schools and universities and by civic organizations in every section of the Union. Pan-American day will become an outward symbol of the constantly strengthening unity of purpose and unity of ideals of the republics of this hemisphere.

In the latter part of 1924, I had the privilege of visiting 11 of the countries of Latin America. This visit made a deep and lasting impression upon me. It was inspiring to observe, at first hand, not only the progress that Latin America is making along social, economic and cultural lines, but also the important part which the countries you represent are destined to play in world affairs. We have developed an international system based on the principle of equality, combined with a full recognition of the obligations as well as the rights of states.

The American republics are today rapidly approaching the stage where every major difference existing between them will be settled by the orderly processes of conciliation and arbitration.

In this respect, the Western Hemisphere has placed an enviable record before the nations of the world. From the earliest period of their history, the governments of the republics of this hemisphere have been earnest advocates of the peaceful settlement of international disputes. They have demonstrated their willingness and even eagerness to adopt and apply mediation, conciliation and arbitration. The common purpose of the Americas to eliminate war as a major contribution to modern civilization.

Obligations to Posterity.

The full significance of this achievement is not always realized, for it carries with it heavy obligations to posterity. Future progress along these lines can only be assured through constant vigilance and an unwavering determination to make the union of the American republics as now expressed in the Pan-American Union, an example to the world. We are not attempting in any way to develop a super-state or to interfere with the freedom of action of any of the states, members of the Union, but rather to develop an atmosphere of good will—a spirit of co-operation and mutual understanding—in which any difference that may arise, no matter how important, will find a ready solution.

I cordially congratulate you, gentlemen of the governing board, on your happy initiative in establishing Pan-American Day and, at the same time, I send a message of fraternal greeting, in the name of the people of the United States, to all the inhabitants of our sister republics.

Reciprocal Understanding.

President Hoover recalled that, during his 1924 visit to 11 Latin-American countries, it became increasingly evident to him that the various nations had everything to gain by keeping in close contact with each other and by developing a spirit of co-operation of national aims and aspirations.

"A peculiarity heavy responsibility rests upon the nations of the Western hemisphere," the Chief Executive said, "a responsibility which, at the same time, is a high privilege. Richly endowed by nature with the means of peaceful settlement of international disputes, the governments of this hemisphere have been earnest advocates of the peaceful settlement of international disputes."

"The common purpose to eliminate war and the determination to achieve peace and security represent a major contribution of the Americas to modern civilization."

Stimson, Tellez, Ferrara.

Secretary Stimson asserted that Pan-American day, which President Hoover had proclaimed, was "intended to emphasize those basic principles of international service which tend to bring the nations of America closer to one another."

"The constructive achievements

'COMMON PURPOSE TO ELIMINATE WAR'

Executive Views That as Major Contribution to Envoy Speak.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—President Hoover today envisioned Western Hemisphere nations in the near future as settling every major difference by the "orderly processes of conciliation and arbitration."

Leading official Washington in its celebration of the first Pan-American day, which simultaneously was observed throughout the 21
Latin-American republics, the chief executive described the common purpose of the Americas to eliminate war as a major contribution to modern civilization.

The American republics are today rapidly approaching the stage where every major difference existing between them will be settled by the orderly processes of conciliation and arbitration.

ing—in which any difference that may arise, no matter how important, will find a ready solution.

Obligations to Posterity.

It is of the greatest importance that the people of the United States become better acquainted with the history, the traditions, the culture and the ideals of the other republics of America. To an increasing extent courses on the languages, literature and history of the countries of Latin America are being offered in the educational institutions of the United States.

A similar realization of the importance of becoming better acquainted with the history and development of the United States
exists in the countries of Latin America. Increasing numbers of students from the countries to the south are being enrolled in the colleges and universities of the United States. I cannot emphasize too strongly this important aspect of inter-American relations.

tance that the people of the United States become better ac-

exists in the countries of Latin America. Increasing numbers of students from the countries to the colleges and universities of the United States. I cannot emphasize too strongly this important aspect of inter-American relations.

Reciprocal Understanding.

President Hoover recalled that, during his 1924 visit to 11 Latin-American countries, it became increasingly evident to him that the various nations had everything to gain by keeping in close contact with each other and by developing a spirit of co-operation of national aims and aspirations.

"A peculiarity heavy responsibility rests upon the nations of the Western hemisphere," the Chief Executive said, "a responsibility which,
at the same time, is a high privilege.

Richly endowed by nature with the means of peaceful settlement of international disputes,

the governments of this hemisphere have been earnest advocates of the peaceful settlement of international disputes."

"The common purpose to eliminate war and the determination to achieve peace and security represent a major contribution of the Americas to modern civilization."

Stimson, Tellez, Ferrara.

Secretary Stimson asserted that Pan-American day, which President Hoover had proclaimed, was "intended to emphasize those basic principles of international service which tend to bring the nations of America closer to one another."

PRINCE CHARLES OF BELGIUM ARRIVES INCOGNITO IN U. S.

Second Son of King Albert to Study
American Industry and Requests
No Affairs in His Honor.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 14.—Charles de Rethy, otherwise Prince Charles of Belgium, Count of Flanders and second son of King Albert, arrived today on the liner Pennland for a visit to America. He is traveling incognito and hopes his incognito will be preserved.

There are to be no receptions and no special affairs of any kind in his honor, at his own request.

The Prince declined to say what his itinerary would be, how long he would remain in New York, or where he would reside while here.

BRUSSELS, April 14.—Prince Charles has gone to America to study the methods of Thomas A. Edison, Henry Ford and other industrial leaders. He plans to stay two months in America and will visit the Baldwin Locomotive Works, the Edison laboratories and the Ford plant, as well as Niagara Falls, Yosemite Valley and other scenic points, traveling to the Pacific Coast before he returns.

A permanent budget bureau, year-round planning of city expenditures and modernization of assessment methods are advocated in a bulletin issued today by the Bureau of Municipal Research.

The bureau, an unofficial body, makes periodical reports on the financial and other problems of city and State governments.

"Three budget hearings have been held during the last month," the bulletin states. "They were devoted to requests that the increase asked for by the Board of Children's Guardians be granted, that the apportionment for convention and publicity purposes be maintained, and that the maintenance of comfort stations in Carondelet

Park be improved. At the present time the Board of Estimate and Appropriation is considering the revision of the budget requests which it will recommend to the Board of Aldermen.

"The Board of Equalization will soon render its decision as to total assessed valuation of city property. The amount of that valuation will determine the tax rate which must be levied for debt purposes, and the sums which must be allocated by law for the use of the library, Art Museum and Zoo."

(The City Board of Equalization

Saturday fixed the total assessed valuation of city property at $1,- public utility property by the State be about $100,000,000, is still to be

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

What St. Louis Workers Are Thinking.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

At the meeting of civic leaders held at the Odeon, veiled statements were made by some of the speakers that the failure to raise the $300,000 might possibly mean social unrest. As proof that the speakers were not exaggerating will you allow me to state some of the remarks that I hear every day among my fellow workers in one of St. Louis' largest manufacturing plants?

First, statements by certain bankers and men like Julius H. Barnes of the United States Chamber of Commerce—that wage reductions are necessary—are creating intense bitterness among the men; then President Hoover's statement that he was pleased that wages generally had been maintained during the depression brings from the men the remark that the President doesn't know what is happening, or at least his St. Louis advisers are lying down on the job.

But now that the country's largest industry, reduce wages 12½ per cent in spite of the fact that every large shoe concern in St. Louis had a good year in 1930? But with the threat of transferring the business to the country factory, the manufacturers easily put the reduction over. It is a well known fact that many other St. Louis factories have made from 10 per cent to 15 per cent wage reductions.

These lowered wages, together with short working time, are causing intense bitterness among the men.

If you could hear these men today and remember them, I know them 25 years ago you would never think you were in the same United States.

Strangely, it is not among the younger men that the feeling is bitterest, but it is among the men of middle age that hopelessness is greatest, realizing that they are fast approaching the age when they will no longer be needed in modern industry. They look at the future and indeed feel desperate.

Unless several times $300,000 is raised to care for those in dire need, civic leaders can indeed be anxious about the future. American workers are made of different stuff than those of the older countries of the world, and, although they may suffer for a while, they will never sit idly by and see their families starve.

These depressing days call for careful, tactful and sympathetic leadership, and unless it is furnished by our trained thinkers, the men, themselves, will raise up their own leaders with all the unhappy results that untrained leadership, however zealous, is apt to bring in its train.

WORKMAN.

A Discouraged Fisherman.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

LET me add my protest to that of those opposed to fish-gigging, for it is certainly being practiced in every river and stream throughout Missouri.

I have tried fishing in all four directions of the State and for several years past it has ceased to be a sport, as a result of gigging. Each fishing trip has to be planned farther away from St. Louis and still no fish.

An anti-gigging law will have to be passed and enforced—or else.

H. W. GALLAGHER.

Incompetent Drivers.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

MONEY to glance new traffic safety measures, discussed by the Safety Council recently, could be raised through the device of the driver's license, already in use in many states and greatly to be recommended for the protection of automobile drivers. Only recently a fatal accident involved a deaf mute behind the wheel. Is a person so afflicted competent to drive an automobile through the city streets? I know a woman who piloted a big car while suffering from cataract of the eye. I know of 12 and 15-year-old boys who drive cars at 50 miles an hour.

A person handling an automobile should be of a responsible age and in possession of all his or her faculties; the test for a driver should be a stiff one and the driver unable to produce a license upon demand should be fined. Only some such drastic measure, coupled with educative matter directed at pedestrians to whom the automobile has become commonplace, will arouse the public to the menace of the streets.

PEDESTRIAN.

Improper Voting.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I UNDERSTAND that 120,000 citizens voted on election day, April 7, 1931.

I would like to know if this estimate includes all these ballots not correctly scratched which were rejected, or does this mean only those ballots which were voted right?

A policeman who stood guard at one of the precincts told me that 254 persons voted and, in counting up, 78 ballots were rejected due to the fact that these ballots were improperly scratched. In that is a fact, it is time for the government to establish a balloting school.

There are 600 precincts in St. Louis and if 20 ballots are rejected at each precinct, 12,000 ballots would be lost, which might elect a candidate who otherwise would be defeated.

There ought to be some remedy for this condition.

JAMES E. C. DOUGHERTY.

"I AM THE STATE."

In vetoing the bill to repeal the prohibition laws of Illinois, Gov. Emmerson has usurped the will of the people, violated his party's pledge, gravely abused his official authority and has attempted to defend his action with an explanation which ought, in our opinion, to end his official career.

The Republican party in its convention last year drafted the submission of this question to popular vote and engaged itself and its candidates to abide by the result of that referendum. The thing was done, confessedly, as a matter of political strategy to assist the candidacy of Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick for United States Senator. Mrs. McCormick had won the nomination in the primary as an uncompromising dry. Republican leaders, acutely conscious of the growing anti-prohibition sentiment in the State, realized that the Democratic candidate, former Senator Lewis, an avowed wet, would be a formidable opponent. To placate wet Republicans a plan was devised by which Mrs. McCormick could qualify her position on prohibition so as to conform to the wishes of the people of Illinois. Mrs. McCormick acquiesced in the plan, agreed to abide by the verdict of the ballot, and Gov. Emmerson, tacitly at least, entered into the same obligation. There is no recorded utterance of his during the campaign that he deserved the right to himself as Governor to ignore the mandate of the polls.

Concerning the referendum, Gov. Emmerson says that "taken at its face value the vote seems to indicate an overwhelming majority in favor of the repeal of the Illinois prohibition act." How else, pray, may a vote be taken except at its face value? How can a vote be tallied, and a result arrived at and announced except by a count of the ballots? There is no other honorable or acceptable way. Emmerson, however, calculates that the non-voters on this question outnumbered the voters and by casualty as absurd as it is audacious assumes to void the verdict of the people the unrecorded expression of the delinquents. It is an assumption without historical parallel and ought not to go unchallenged. L'état c'est moi—I am the state, is Gov. Emmerson's edict.

The Governor speaks of the lawless possibilities that might follow repeal of the prohibition act. It is not a recent discovery. All this had been dinned into the ears of the people during the campaign. Even so, they voted for repeal. The responsibility for the decision is theirs. It is not Gov. Emmerson's. And when he revives the showponer fears and alarms which, it may be observed, have not materialized in the states that have repealed their prohibition acts, he merely elaborates a feeble plea with fanciful speculation.

Despite the handsome profit margins which have now been disclosed, electric companies in Pennsylvania have been permitted to charge householders rates which are substantially higher than those charged in surrounding states; higher, in fact, than those charged in communities which are located at a far greater distance from the rich coal deposits which are the source of power. Rates for homes in Pennsylvania have been double and triple those charged by the public plant in the Province of Ontario for comparable service. And for years a Public Service Commission which has had full knowledge of these excessive rates and profits has done little or nothing to bring them down.

The Pennsylvania investigation has revealed the serious ineffectiveness of existing utility regulation in at least one American state. For the first time it has lifted from the actual takings of important purveyors of electricity the veil of secrecy which habitually conceals them. There can be little doubt that similar studies in other states, if they could be made, would disclose many similar situations. The Pennsylvania figures emphasize the need for vigilant public action to curb the monopolistic practices of the power barons.

WHAT RUSSIA NEEDS.

Many things have been imputed to Comrade Stalin, but he can never justly be accused of having a sense of humor. True to the melancholy Russian tradition, he deported Eva Gareete Grady for publishing an anecdote about him. The anecdote was reasonably funny. We dare say the ex-kulaks (farmers who used to own more than one cow) got their first laugh in weeks when they heard it; likewise the bourgeoisie and whatever members of the old aristocracy that are still in the shadow of the Kremlin. If the truth were known, perhaps even some of the loyal members of the party forged the five-year plan for a moment to crack a smile. In the ancient days, rulers maintained court jesters to introduce the leaven of humor into the affairs of state, and to some degree the institution still lives. We have, for example George Moses, Big Bill Thompson and Jimmy Walker. Instead of packing off Mrs. Grady, the "man of steel" might have installed her in the Kremlin with the title, "Commissar of Humor." Russia, plunged in the solemn and serious business of reconstruction, needs comic relief.

FOODS AND FADS.

Dr. Alvarez of the Mayo Clinic has scanned the menu, run his blue pencil through spinach and is not enjoying the applause of a grateful populace. Indeed, he regards the whole vitamin vogue as a curious phenomenon and ventures the future historian of medicine will be hard put to it to account for the dietary obsessions of the twentieth century.

With the difficulties of the future historian of medicine we are blandly unconcerned. Assuming, however, that he is a good reporter, the assignment will be engaging. A little research will reveal to him that throughout our particular period we had well defined fashions in ills and pills, so to speak. Perhaps it all started when the omniscient Col. Roosevelt exuberantly blurted Charles Wagner's "The Strenuous Life." In any event, maladies and remedies, as we know, have strayed their little day and moved out for new liabilities and cures.

If you make such demand, in order that it may be verified, it is proper that you furnish proof that you are the insured named in the above policy and are the party entitled to refund. Therefore, we suggest that in making your written demand you state the date on which the policy took effect, the date of its expiration, the amount of the premium stated therein, the kind of property insured and its location; also that the original premium was paid and that the policy was not assigned, reduced in amount or canceled.

Our correspondent avers that he would like to get the refund, but that he is unable to supply the information requested. He asks us to throw away the insurance company's letter and adds: "I have kissed the 85 cents good-bye." It is only fair to say that not all insurance companies have unrolled the red tape in this fashion, but that any of them should make it difficult for policy holders to get the money to which they are entitled is inexplicable.

During the many years of litigation, resulting finally in complete victory for the Missouri Insurance Department, the companies continued to collect the old premium. The responsibility is theirs to return the excess. If policy holders must fill out elaborate questionnaires, many of them, like our correspondent, will relinquish their claims and the companies will retain money which does not belong to them.

POWER RATES IN PENNSYLVANIA.

Public utility companies have long attempted to meet the charge that their rates are exorbitantly high with the plea that their costs also are high and their profit margins accordingly low. Indeed, they have almost made it appear that their enterprise is a form of charity, carried on in a fine spirit of self-sacrifice for the benefit of the community.

The ground for this argument has now been cut from under their feet by evidence presented by Stephen Raushenbush, economist on Gov. Pinchot's staff, to the committee of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives which is investigating the Public Service Commission and the public utility companies of that State. Mr. Raushenbush's investigation has uncovered the earnings of some 70 electric utility companies in Pennsylvania during the years 1925 to 1929. In each of these years there were from 15 to 17 companies which enjoyed profits in excess of a 20 per cent return on their own claimed investment. In 1926 and in 1927 there were seven companies which received more than a 30 per cent return, and three companies whose profits exceeded 50 per cent on invested capital. The concerns which serve the State's two largest urban areas consistently reaped profits which ranged from 9 per cent to 11 per cent per annum throughout the period.

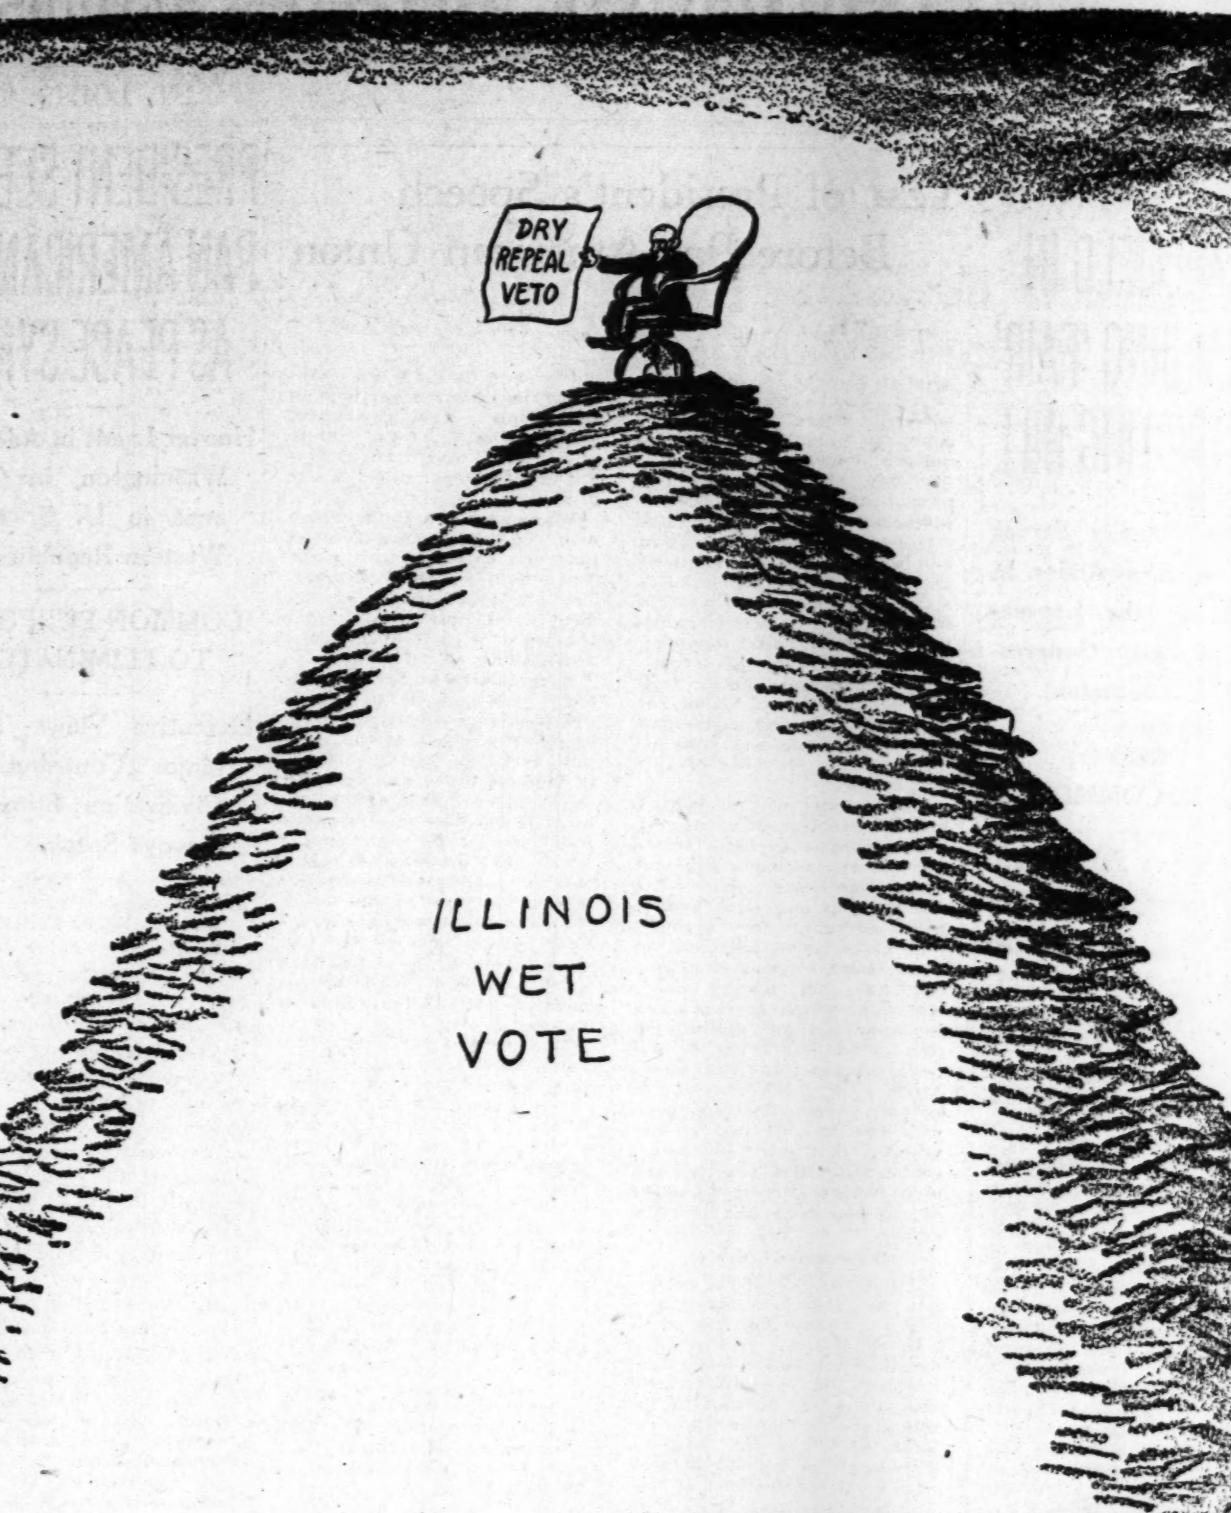

Pennsylvania law recognizes 7 per cent as a fair return on utility investments. Something like half of the electric companies in the State, however, were earning 50 per cent or more in excess of this return in each of the five years for which the study was made. One-third of them made profits which were double the 7 per cent allowed by law, and in every year 14 or 15 companies realized gains which were three times the size of the profits to which they were fairly entitled.

A similar computation of the profits of natural gas companies for the year 1929 shows an average return throughout the State which is 65 per cent in excess of the 7 per cent which is generally regarded by courts as ample and fair. Only in the case of private water companies were earnings found to correspond to the legal limits. Here the possibility of public ownership appears to have exercised a restraining influence in the determination of rates.

Despite the handsome profit margins which have now been disclosed, electric companies in Pennsylvania have been permitted to charge householders rates which are substantially higher than those charged in surrounding states; higher, in fact, than those charged in communities which are located at a far greater distance from the rich coal deposits which are the source of power. Rates for homes in Pennsylvania have been double and triple those charged by the public plant in the Province of Ontario for comparable service. GOV. EMMERSON: THE PEOPLE DON'T KNOW WHAT'S GOOD FOR THEM.

Shall We Fight a Foreign Trade War?

Aggressive expansion of U. S. exports would mean lower wages and living standards here, with higher tariff walls abroad; we might wreck England and Germany in trade war, but loss would surpass gain; capitalism could not withstand the shock, and communism would triumph; our security lies in developing domestic field.

From "Business Adrift," by Wallace Brett Donham; Published by Whittlesey House (Reprinted by Permission.)

The writer of this article is Dean of the Graduate School of Business Administration, Harvard University.

WHAT is the probable effect of forcing exports, regardless of whether we have great natural or management advantages, and without asking whether the proposed exports are in special lines, like equipment and capital for foreign securities? We need England and Germany more than we could hope to profit from their destruction.

The effect on our wages will be adverse. State or lower standards of living in this country will fall. There are already many signs of an effort to reduce wages to help expand exports here and abroad will rise higher and higher. We shall be in bitter competition with the most powerful industrial nations of the world, with their power standard of living, and with conditions abroad which will lead to the most disastrous type of competition.

If we are going to compete on a large scale abroad, we should go at once on a free trade basis and take the social consequences, both in distressed or bankrupt industries and in wage scales throughout our industry based entirely on relative world-wide efficiency. Our most efficient industries with large relative advantages would expand their markets, and our industries which have little or no advantage would disappear. We should gradually turn more and more of our labor and capital to mass production until most of our business is concentrated in a few great products. At any time Europe could destroy our principal market by developing mass production industries behind tariff walls, as we once developed our industries behind tariff walls, but in the near future this is unlikely. They would presumably prefer the free access to our market which we should give.

But there is no chance that we shall go on practically a free trade basis or that Europe will. Nor shall we plan consciously to reduce our wage scales. The recommendations are wholly unrealistic. Stability is too important. So far as the think problems through, we shall attempt to minimize and do our best to increase American standards of living without first destroying most of our small industries.

In my judgment, as a matter of general policy for the coming generation, our efforts to expand our exports should be concentrated on the export of technology, management and limited amount of capital. Such a policy would in itself lessen the strain on international movements of gold and credit. It would also avoid upsetting our whole economy. Exports of capital should be limited to capital represented by well protected securities. The capital exported should be for use in ways which aid in improving production abroad. Our aim should be to help, not to compete.

Suppose, however, that we decide to carry war with other countries, and to exclude competition here by means of tariffs while at the same time we compete with England and Germany for the trade of the open markets of the world. It is my judgment that the future historian of medicine will have an unpleasant task to perform.

McMahon Gandhi works 20 hours a day, and the poor fellow looks every minute of it.

A Way Out for Highway Safety?

From the Baltimore Evening Sun.

A NY hopeful sign for highway safety ought to be passed on with enthusiasm, so it is with enthusiasm that we record the experience of Paris, which finds that its number of fatal traffic accidents has dropped from 328 in 1929 to 292 in 1930. The explanation given by the Paris police is that traffic has at last become so congested that drivers can no longer get up speed enough for a good smash.

Perhaps, then, if the traffic problem is left to itself it will work out its own salvation. When that time comes we may not get anywhere, but at least we will get there.

made here on a socially important scale. Many articles of luxury and handwork are in this class. Such imports will be necessary to balance interest payments made to us when the balance of trade changes. We should welcome and develop this amount of foreign trade.

If we do not enter into an aggressive expansion of our foreign trade, only minor readjustments in our tariff walls will be necessary from time to time to protect existing socialist groups against new competitive conditions. Such minor changes will sufficiently depress their markets and safeguard our home industries. If, however, we expand our foreign trade aggressively, higher and higher tariff walls will be necessary because the pressure of imports will increase. We now face the possibility that by inept handling of our export trade policies for the next few years, we may bring about the economic destruction of England and Germany, followed by the collapse of European civilization.

We cannot both protect labor and capital against world-wide readjustments and at the same time build up a secure foreign trade. If we succeed temporarily in so doing, the later result would be a disastrous insecurity for both labor and capital. For social reasons we shall certainly continue to protect home industries, as will the rest of the world, in the years immediately ahead.

I believe acceptance of a considerable limitation of our business to our own market is the only way to maintain our profits, the only way to maintain our standards of living, and the only way to give other great industrial nations a chance.

Stalin has recently given the capitalist world a well deserved warning which we should take to heart. On the assumption that we proceed as we are now going, no one has struck a more deeply philosophical note. He says: "Capitalism is still strong and may recover, but this last year has exposed its fatal weakness—capitalism cannot exist without markets, and the mutual rivalry of capitalist states bars them from each other's markets. Thus the stronger states are forced to bring pressure upon the weak ones."

It is inevitable that the efforts of the stronger powers to overcome the economic crisis will force them to crush their weaker rivals. That does not necessarily mean war—not for the time being—until a later day, when the giant powers must fight for markets among themselves.

I do not believe this is the only possibility, but we are going in that direction. Shall we start the bitter struggle Stalin foresees by expanding exports to the end that our wealthier citizens—if we succeed, become wealthier and our poorer classes poorer? Shall we begin once again the course of action which brought on the Great War? Shall we make a prophet of Stalin, through lack of any plan, by destroying England and Germany?

Unique Greatness

BURTON, ARABIAN NIGHTS ADVENTURER. By Fairfax Downey. (Chas. Scribner's Sons, New York City, $3.00.)

RICHARD FRANCIS BURTON, who was born in 1821 and died in 1890, was one of the greatest adventurers, explorers and linguists in history. His translation of the "Arabian Nights" alone would have been sufficient to insure enduring fame, but that monumental achievement was only one by-product of a life of action, the bare account of which reads like the invention of a highly imaginative romancer.

Both physically and mentally Burton was so endowed as to be capable of prodigious labors, and the driving spirit of him was that of a Titan. With "the brain of a god and the soul of a devil," as someone remarked, and aptly as his photographs attest, Burton seems to have realized in his life practically the whole range of human powers, from brutal prowess and ferocity to the serene heights where the fine flower of the human spirit blooms. A great swordsman and master of a score or more of languages and dialects learned somehow in his wanderings in five continents, truly great both as scholar and fighter, he was variably described by his contemporaries as the Admirable Crichton of the nineteenth century, "Raleigh out of his time, but greater," "the foremost personality" of the Victorian era, etc. The descriptions all sound like exaggerations, but it was the man's life itself that was exuberant, the man's spirit that evened the exceptional lives of others.

In the present volume there is a picture of Burton as a fencer that seems to tell the whole story of the man, for if any human being ever looked the part he played in the world, Burton does in that picture. The combination of athletic, intellectual and physical power that is revealed in this portrait has made one reader pore over it with a sense of glorious uplift.

Great as his power was, Burton had need of it all, considering his view of life and the world. Although he was indomitable and resolute, he was not without effort, or whatever one may choose to call the hidden pattern-making force in a man's objective life, was always minimizing or concealing his successes in an utterly unreasonable and sometimes almost heart-breaking way. In ancient times it would have been said that the gods were jealous of the man. Much was due to his temperament and the jealousies of his contemporaries, per-

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., April 14.

THE pleasure with which the people will welcome the brother of the Emperor of Japan, Prince Takamatsu, and his wife, Princess Kikuko, will be very deep and sincere. It will exist not only because of the royal rank of the visitors, but because they represent a nation for whom we have the highest regard and with whom we have always been on terms of peace and friendship. These sentiments are the real foundation of progress.

The acquaintance that comes from the contact of one people with another through travel increases the bonds of understanding and sympathy. Trade is increased and common interests are developed. Our commerce with Japan is large and important for both countries. But, after all, friendship between people is the important thing. If that is on a sound basis economic relations will adjust themselves.

In stating that he desired to see our art treasures the Prince was better advised than many of us. He will find them of a richness and extent seldom surpassed. Whatever we may have of interest will be gladly displayed to the Prince and Princess, and we hope they may take home with them the realization of true admiration for Japan.

CAPT. HIRAM S. TOWNSEND DIES IN U. S. HOSPITAL

Veteran of Spanish-American and World War Succumbed in Chicago.

Capt. Hiram S. Townsend, U. S. Army Reserve, a veteran of the Spanish-American and World Wars, died today of cancer at a Government hospital at Chicago. He was 54 years old.

Capt. Townsend was a post commander of Richard Anderson Post, American Legion, and a member of the Forty and Eight. He and his wife, Hannah, with whom he lived at $304 Jackson boulevard, Vinita Park, were active in work among disabled veterans, to many of whom Mrs. Townsend is known as "Ma." Prior to the World War the Townsends conducted a large bakery at Grand boulevard and Wyoming street. Later he went into the can manufacturing business in St. Louis County. He served in the United States during the World War as a commissary officer.

Two years ago Capt. Townsend accompanied Francis M. Curle, St. Louis attorney, and the latter's 13-year-old son on a horseback trip to Corinth, Miss., to visit relatives of Curle.

Capt. Townsend underwent an operation for cancer of the stomach at Veterans' Hospital here last January. He later was taken to Chicago for further treatment. A son, Willard, departed today for Chicago to bring the body here for burial.

HOSPITAL CAMPAIGN IN MAY
BY E. ST. LOUIS SPONSORS

Protestant Group Has Acquired Site at 29th and State Streets For Building.

A campaign to raise funds for a new Christian Welfare Hospital building, will be conducted in East St. Louis in May, trustees announced. Headquarters have been opened at 119 Illinois avenue, for preliminary work.

The hospital, which is operated by the St. Clair Hospital Association and was organized by the Protestant Women's Welfare League, has acquired a seven-acre site at Twenty-ninth and State streets.

The association intends to erect the first unit as soon as funds are available, consisting of operating rooms, laboratories, maternity section, wards, a 175-bed capacity and other modern facilities.

The Christian Welfare Hospital at 1509 Illinois avenue, was formerly the Deaconess Hospital, and was built in 1888. Its present facilities are inadequate, the trustees declare. A training school for nurses is conducted in connection with the hospital.

Mrs. Paul Sedwick is in charge of the campaign headquarters. George D. Burds is superintendent of the hospital.

URGE INCREASE IN PLAY FACILITIES DURING SLUMP

Secretary of National Recreation Association Says Unemployed Should Use Their Leisure.

Recreational facilities should be provided for unemployed persons in order to put them to constructive use, Dr. C. F. Stimson, field secretary of the National Recreation Association, told the Neighborhood and Recreation Department of the Community Center yesterday.

American cities, he declared, should increase rather than decrease their recreational facilities in the present emergency. He told how increases in such facilities had been made in 25 cities in 12 states. In cities where recreational budgets were pared down as a measure of economy, he went on, preparations are afoot to restore the budgets as the economy had proved to be false.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

LATE winter and spring travelers are returning to St. Louis. Mrs. Heman J. Pettengill returned yesterday from Miami Springs, Fla., where she has been since February. Mrs. Pettengill has opened her house in the St. Louis Country Club grounds. Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Shoemaker of Hotel Chase, who have been in California since the first part of December, will arrive Friday. They spent the greater part of their time in Pasadena. Mrs. Charles Whitlaw of the Park Plaza, who has returned from California, where she spent two months, departed yesterday for Battle Creek, Mich., to spend several weeks.

Mrs. Calvin R. Lightner and her sister, Mrs. Allen V. Cockrell of the Kings-Way Hotel are in New York, following winter trips and are expected to return to St. Louis in a few days. Mrs. Lightner has been in Europe, following a Mediterranean cruise, and Mrs. Cockrell has been in Haiti, visiting her son-in-law and daughter, Capt. and Mrs. Gilder D. Jackson. They will spend the summer at Mrs. Cockrell's cottage at Fish Creek, Wis.

The acquaintance that comes from the contact of one people with another through travel increases the bonds of understanding and sympathy. Trade is increased and common interests are developed. Our commerce with Japan is large and important for both countries. But, after all, friendship between people is the important thing. If that is on a sound basis economic relations will adjust themselves.

In stating that he desired to see our art treasures the Prince was better advised than many of us. He will find them of a richness and extent seldom surpassed. Whatever we may have of interest will be gladly displayed to the Prince and Princess, and we hope they may take home with them the realization of true admiration for Japan.

Miss Florence Steinway of New York, who is the guest of Miss Lucy Thompson, daughter of Guy A. Thompson, 23 Washington terrace, will leave tomorrow for her home. Miss Steinway has been the guest of honor at a series of small parties the last week.

The annual spring opening of the St. Louis Country Club will take place Saturday, May 9. The swimming pool will be opened for the summer, there will be golf and tennis for those who care to play and in the evening there will be a dinner dance, the first formal party of the spring season. Announcements will be sent to the members in a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Colt Day, 5117 Westminster place, will leave St. Louis April 30 for New York to meet their daughter, Miss Mary Colt Day, when she arrives May 4, from a tour of Europe. Miss Day, under the chaperonage of Mrs. Atwell T. Lincoln, and Miss Helen A. Arcey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Arcey, 1100 Forest Park, will rank with "Twain's Early Western Travels," issued by the same company.

Those in charge of the arrangements for the play and dance, are: Mrs. Charles A. Miller Jr., general chairman; Mrs. C. C. Jones, costumes; Miss Maude Miller, Miss Clara Ruch and Miss Lucille Murch, stage properties; Mrs. Guy W. Karraker, Mrs. Adrian L. Buschman, Miss Ruth Powers and Mrs. D. Leslie Chaney, publicity; Miss Helen Prince, art.

Patronesses for the Rosalind Kain alumnae spring card party to be given Saturday at the St. Louis University School of Medicine include the following: Mrs. P. H. Hollman, Mrs. Bernard Lee, Mrs. Edward Reilly, Mrs. John R. Kelly, Mrs. Leo W. Wever, Mrs. J. J. Mcsemidissolute lives, just sit around the night clubs some early morning. They usually whirl into action when the crowd leaves. And their victims are often carried out feet up.

A SHADCHEN holds forth in an office building at Broadway and Forty-second street. He is a benign Jewish patriarch who derives his calling from the decree in the Talmud, "Blessed is he who finds his mate through the wisdom of an intermediary." The shadchen introduces persons of the opposite sex for the honorable purpose of marriage—for a fee. They are numerous in the Ghettos.

Some of the visitors are iron workers, clubmen, taxi drivers and even adagio dancers. But mostly the recruits are among those who live hard and dangerously along the dazzling path. They cannot do much with their minds, so they keep them up physically.

Men who imbibe heavily of speakeasy varnish, all-night poker and dice players, confidence boys, race-track touts and such are regular patrons. The pasty-faced gamblers drop in to toss the medicine ball in the effort to give sagging muscles a little bulge.

Any number of those sleek boys pop into the chop houses at twilight looking so fresh and vigorous have just come from a music jousting at one of the sundry little gyms. In other days they used to "steam out" in a Turkish bath.

But a Turkish bath a day is a trifle too depleting and they have found massages stimulate an appetite and give them a temporary red-corpused flush. There are also several institutions catering especially to wild ladies who go the pace.

If anyone thinks these ladies cannot pack a punch despite their

HELEN KELLER ON MATERIALISM

NEW YORK, April 14.—Helen Keller last night told the World Conference on Work for the Blind that American materialism is only on the surface.

"Because," she said, "this country is rich in material things, superficial critics dwell on our materialism and the handicapped alike are parts of a great social whole and dependent one upon another."

I. G. A. MODEL GROCERY Open to the Public

Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday Between the Hours of 10 A. M. to 5 P. M. and 7 P. M. to 10 P. M.

We cordially invite the public of St. Louis and vicinity to visit the Model Grocery Store which we have constructed at 1103 Clark Avenue, St. Louis, Mo., for the benefit of the independent grocers of this section. We are proud of this store and have decided to afford the general public the opportunity of inspecting it.

There are thousands of stores like this model throughout thirty-seven States of the Country. Through our merchandising program we bring better values to the housewife. Each store is a home-owned and home-operated store. Soon there will be a number of these beautiful I. G. A. stores in St. Louis and the surrounding community. Watch for the newspaper announcement of the opening of these stores and visit your nearest I. G. A. grocer.

The I. G. A. grocers in St. Louis and vicinity are residents, many of them old-time business men who have built up a great reputation for honesty and fair dealing. They are men who take pride in owning their own business and sell exactly the merchandise and the quality that pleases their customers. They have home interests. They pay local taxes. The growth and success of these stores will assure young men of tomorrow an equal opportunity to go into the grocery business.

You will find many surprises in store for you when you visit the Model Store. You will see how shopping is made easier so that you will have more time for your family and outside activities. I. G. A. stores are for the woman who believes that a woman's place is somewhere else besides standing in front of a counter to be waited on. Here are the stores of economy. They save you time and money.

PRESIDENT VIEWS
PAN AMERICAN DAY
AS SYMBOL OF PEACE

of the last 40 years," he said, "we promise of even larger results in the future. We have in this hemisphere entered upon a period of international development which I firmly believe is destined to give the world an outstanding example of mutual helpfulness in the solution of the problems common to all countries. Without the slightest attempt at domination in an atmosphere of mutual respect and confidence—we are endeavoring to place the experience of each at the service of all, thus promoting the well-being of our respective peoples."

The Secretary said the intended international co-operation called for no abandonment of legitimate national aims, but "does mean that all such aims must be so shaped as not to conflict with the complete fulfillment of international obligations."

Asserting the people of the Americas today have attained a "new consciousness" and face a "future loaded with great prospects" and with heavy responsibilities, Ambassador Telles said for the first time in history "a single harmonious hymn" is raised by the common aspirations of the people of the American republics.

Leter, in an out-door session with student delegations from Washington schools participating, Ambassador Ferraro addressed himself to the younger people with an assertion that international co-operation is a necessity of daily existence because of the intimate relations between countries and the interdependent interests.

A distinguished international group was invited to the beautiful Pan-American Building to hear the addresses and to take part in a reception to be given by Secretary and Mrs. Stimson. A state dinner will be given tonight by Secretary Adams and Mrs. Adams in honor of the President and Mrs. Hoover.

The President's son, Allan Hoover, is home from Harvard for a short vacation.

NEW ASSESSMENT AND BUDGET PLAN URGED ON CITY

ments, for their 1931-32 appropriations, over the sums which those departments expended in 1929-30, and over their appropriations of 1930-31. The expenditures for 1929-30 are taken for comparison, since those for 1930-31 are not yet known with exactitude.

The greatest amount of increase in departmental budget requests for 1931-32 over the expenditures for 1929-30, the bulletin states, is $1,012,226 for the Department of Public Welfare. The greatest percentage of proposed increase is 45 per cent for miscellaneous charities, corrections and pensions.

"Total departmental requests cannot be estimated at this time," because they would require a tax rate far beyond the maximum which may be levied by the city. The Comptroller has stated that budget requests, if allowed, would swell the budget deficit to $2,836,955 next year.

"It is evident that drastic cuts are necessary if financial equilibrium is to be maintained. The Comptroller has stated: 'No increases will be made for any department this year, and, as Comptroller, I shall as far as lies within my power compel departments to live within the appropriations set aside for their use, regardless of result. We are faced for bond issue to pay our salaries, expenses unless the brakes are applied at once.'

Year-Round Planning Urged.

"This year's financial crisis emphasizes and intensifies the necessity for year-round planning. It is impossible to relieve the tax situation by feverish activity for a short period. Large savings can be effected only through major operations in the form of departmental reorganizations and fundamental changes in operating methods. The Bureau of Municipal Research repeats its recommendation for a permanent budget bureau to give due consideration to financial problems. It again points out the need of modernization in the methods of assessment of property now used in St. Louis.

"The bureau has repeatedly urged that the budget be prepared not later than March 1. This would enable citizens and taxpayers to study the proposals; to ascertain facts; and to present requests and arguments for changes. The city's financial dilemma makes such a revision of the budget calendar especially important.

"The announced intention of the Comptroller to hold all departments to last year's appropriations and to see that they live within their appropriations in conformity with sound budget practice. Furthermore, the Board of Estimate and Apportionment and the Board of Aldermen should see to it that appropriations do not exceed estimated revenues."

Igoe and Cassidy Favor Giving More Money to Children's Guardians.

Radio talks in support of the full appropriation of $327,911, asked by the Board of Children's Guardians, were made last evening by William L. Igoe, former Congressman, and Maurice J. Cassidy, secretary of the Building Trades Council.

Igoe, who has an active acquaintance with charitable work, said: "The separation of the mother from her children, because she is widowed or because the father is in a public institution, has always been regretted by thoughtful citizens. Poverty should not deny the happiness and privilege which is only a mother's to watch over and guide her children."

districts that have existed for 20 years in Missouri are so unfair that as a whole they are probably the worst in the United States. "This master transcends partisanship. It is a travesty on the principles of a republic that 116,000 people in one district count as much in the Congress of the United States as 116,000 people in another district; that 116,000 Missourians have one Congressman, while 674,642, differently grouped, have five Congressmen."

Fundamental of Government.

The Governor declared that "it is fundamental that representative government by a free people must have as its foundation a reasonable equality of voting power for every citizen . . . and that whether we can agree upon a fair redistricting of the State, or whether we must fail, and our candidates for Congress run at large, at least we should be happy that the present flagrant denial of equal representation to people otherwise free, is about to end."

"It is highly desirable that we agree upon an act redistricting the State . . . to elect by districts than by an individual representing a particular district than they can be when no Congressman feels obligated to a particular locality."

"The people are better served by an individual representing a particular district than they can be when no Congressman feels obligated to a particular locality."

"It is better that our people be inconvenienced for two years or even longer, than to be deprived of their right to equal representation in the Congress of the United States."

"In redistricting the State for congressional representation, there is no room for partisanship . . . I come to you seeking no partisan advantage. I indulge you that you believe that in my administration of the office of Governor I have striven for the public welfare, with as little regard for partisan advantage under existing party systems. I have done my best to maintain cordial relations with the members of this assembly, without regard to their party allegiance, and I am happy to say that my efforts in that behalf have been fully reciprocated by you."

Would Be of Some Aid.

"It is because of my faith in the continuance of your friendly cooperation that I make bold to tell you today, in the belief that I may be of some aid to you in arriving at an agreement on a proper redistricting of the State. If no agreement can be reached, then I submit to you seeking no partisan advantage. I indulge you that you believe that in my administration of the office of Governor I have striven for the public welfare, with as little regard for partisan advantage under existing party systems. I have done my best to maintain cordial relations with the members of this assembly, without regard to their party allegiance, and I am happy to say that my efforts in that behalf have been fully reciprocated by you."

"He said he did not think the present measure was satisfactory to either political party, and felt it was highly unsatisfactory to the State as a whole."

PATENT POOLING RULING LIKELY TO BE FAR REACHING

In 1910, the opinion related, "gasoline had been manufactured from crude oil exclusively by distillation and condensation at normal atmospheric pressure. When the demand for gasoline grew rapidly with the widespread use of the automobile, methods for increasing the yield of gasoline from the available supply of crude oil were sought. It had long been known that from a given quantity of crude, additional oil of high volatility could be produced by cracking"; that is, by applying heat and pressure to the residue after distillation. This commercial profitable cracking method and apparatus for manufacturing additional gasoline had not yet been perfected.

"The first such process was perfected by the (Standard of) Indiana company in 1913; and for more than seven years this was the only one practiced in America. During that period the Indiana company not only manufactured cracked gasoline on a large scale, but also had licensed 15 independent concerns to use its process. And had collected, prior to 1921, royalties aggregating $15,000,000."

Although the process does not name the exact inventor, it is interesting to recall that the inventor of the process was Dr. William Burton. He became head of the company, but subsequently was eclipsed by the ambitious and aggressive lawyer, Robert W. Stewart. When the Rockefellers eventually ousted Stewart in 1928, as a result of disclosures concerning the notorious Continental Trading Co.'s connection with the Teapot Dome lease—disclosure which were prompted by the Post-Dispatch—Burton was recalled and re-elected to the board of directors.

Several Formulas Developed.

Continuing, the Supreme Court's opinion related that the cracking process was not controlled by any independent patent, so that other companies persisted in their efforts to develop processes of their own, with the result that the Texas Company, Standard of New Jersey and Gasoline Products Company each evolved its own cracking formula.

Cross-charges of infringement resulted, and the companies, faced with the prospect of costly litigation, decided to adjust their differences privately. Contracts were signed, under which each company was entitled to the use of the others' patents, and each was empowered to license independent concerns to use its process, and a division of the royalties thus derived was agreed on. Each was released by the others from liability for possible infringement in the past. Contracts Assailed by Prosecution.

These contracts were the principal object of the Government's attack, although secondary allegations also were made against other contracts and against other companies which contracted to use the processes.

The court took up in order the successive contentions advanced by the Government and by the defendants.

First, the companies argued that the agreements related solely to the issuance of licenses. That they did not enter into interstate commerce, and hence were not subject to the provisions of the antitrust laws. This contention the Court rejected as "unsound."

"Any agreement between competitors may be illegal if it is a part of a larger plan to control interstate markets," it declared. "Such contracts must be scrutinized to ascertain whether their effect is to suppress or unduly to restrict competition. While manufacture is not interstate commerce, agreements concerning it, which tend to limit the supply or to fix the price of goods entering into interstate commerce, are within the prohibitions of the Sherman act."

Pooling of Royalties.

With respect to the Government's allegation that the pooling of patents resulted in a pooling of royalties, thereby eliminating competition among the principals; that this tended to increase the royalties collected from independent companies using the processes, thus limiting the supply of gasoline, the Court said:

"There is no provision in the agreements which restricts the freedom of the defendants to issue licenses and no license agreement which imposes any restriction upon the quantity of gasoline to be produced, or upon the price, terms or conditions of sale, or upon the territory in which sales may be made."

The Government's contention that the agreement upon a division of royalties "evidenced an intention to obtain a monopoly" was pronounced unsound. The Court remarked in a distinctly approving tone upon the action of the companies in composing their differences rather than resorting to lawsuits, and adds that "an interchange of patent rights is frequently necessary if technical advancement is not to be blocked by litigation. If the available advantages open on reasonable terms to all manufacturers desiring to participate, such interchange may promote rather than restrain competition."

No Monopoly Shown.

The Government alleged that the royalties charged were onerous, and that the necessity of paying them placed the independent licensees at a disadvantage in competing with the owners of the patents. The court observed, first, that the owners were entitled to some advantage by virtue of their ownership, and declared that the anti-trust laws did not apply to such royalties unless their effect was to restrain interstate commerce. In this instance, the court declared, evidence showed that the gasoline industry was not dominated by the owners of the patents.

"No monopoly resulted from the execution of these agreements. Up to 1920 all cracking plants in the United States were either owned by the Indiana company alone, or were operated under licenses issued by it. In 1924 and 1926, after the cross-licensing agreements were in effect, the four primary defendants (Indiana, New Jersey, Texas and Gasoline Products companies), owned or licensed only 55 per cent of the total cracking ca-

DENIES TAXING OF BARS IS DRY LAW VIOLATION

U. S. Court of Appeals Reverses Conviction of Officials in Idaho.

By the Associated Press SAN FRANCISCO, April 14.—Levying taxes on saloons in Northern Idaho did not constitute conspiracy by officials to violate the national prohibition law, the United States Circuit Court of Appeals held yesterday in reversing conviction of an Idaho Mayor, a Sheriff and 16 others.

The decision held such taxation legal because "the power to tax involves the power to destroy, and if pressed far enough will accomplish that result."

Herman J. Rossi, Mayor of Wallace, Idaho; R. E. Meniger, former Sheriff of Shoshone County, and 15 others were involved in a decision written by Judge Frank H. Rudkin, with Judge William Sawtelle concurring. Judge Curtis D. Wilbur dissented.

The 13 defendants were convicted with 28 others of conspiring to collect regular assessments on the vice and liquor traffic in Shoshone County, using the proceeds for civic improvement. The Court found no proof the money collected was ever used for any but public purposes.

FUNERAL OF PRIEST FRIDAY

Services for the Rev. J. T. Foley to Be Held at St. Cronan's

Funeral services for the Rev. Jeremiah T. Foley, pastor of St. Cronan's Catholic Church, 1203 South Boyle avenue, will be held there Friday morning at 9:30 o'clock. Burial will be in Calvary Cemetery.

Father Foley, who was 71 years old, died of heart disease Sunday. He had been a priest for 48 years, and had been pastor of St. Cronan's since it was organized in 1898.

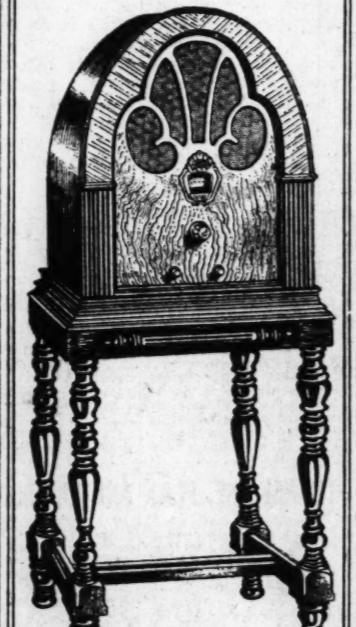

St. Louis U. Alumni Election

Albert C. Hoffmeister was elected president of the General Alumni Association of St. Louis University, at a meeting of the board of governors yesterday. Charles J. Dolan was elected treasurer, and the Rev. William J. Ryan, S. J., was re-elected secretary.

RULING ON BUSINESS BUREAU
New York Official Against Private Detective License.

By the Associated Press ALBANY, N. Y., April 14.—Attorney-General John J. Bennett Jr. announces that the provisions of the general business law providing for the licensing of private detective agencies do not apply to the Better Business Bureau, an organization which investigates business frauds.

In reaching this decision, Bennett overruled the finding of his predecessor in office, Hamilton Ward, who held that the Better Business Bureau had to have a detective agency license.

Speaking From Experience

by Martha Carr

Letters intended for this column must be addressed to Martha Carr of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Mrs. Carr will answer all questions of general interest but, of course, cannot give advice on matters of a purely legal or medical nature. Those who do not care to have their letters published may enclose an addressed and stamped envelope for a personal reply.

DEAR MARTHA: With prettiness and pettiness revived and proudly sponsored by the fashion-conscious which, a year or so ago, seemed everything envying of the feminine, what about the chaperon? With the boyish bob and the boyish suit so generally the badge of the chic and the independent, one almost felt the young roysterer had elbowed the poor chaperon out for good.

But now I hear that chaperons are revived again to act as convenors for the young. What do you think?

MODERN MOTHER,

According to a very dependable authority the chaperon has never been quite as extinct as the people who raised at the harum-scarum young girl would have you believe.

"The chaperon of today is something of a belle herself," said Miss Martha Maynard, director of the social secretariat of a New York society and sports magazine.

Plenty of strict mammas have always insisted that during their first season debutantes daughters must take some one along when dining or dancing in restaurants, however much the girls may have hoped against being kept in leading strings.

Now parents do not have to insist. It is fashionable to be Victorian and the girls rather fancy the idea. "so quaint you know."

But there is nothing of the old fashioned about the chaperon now. She doesn't sit in the dressing room knitting. Not at all. The fact is, she is some young woman, old enough to lend a touch of dignity, but frequently the "life of the party." She is sometimes a pretty and smart young woman who has been out several seasons and gets a kick out of feeling that she has a job. She sometimes helps to keep the conversations from getting stale, as she couldn't afford to let a party die on her hands.

Miss Maynard, whose duties are many, from putting on society-charity firm nights at the theaters and debutante balls to selecting dependable chaperons in New York, has a hand-picked list of availables who get $2 an hour up to midnight, with a minimum evening charge of $5.

Thus the harassed parents who are not equal to keeping going into the small hours, especially at half-day times, are glad to procure these personable professional chaperons.

DEAR MARTHA CARR: Have read your column and seen the advice you have given others and thought perhaps you could help me.

I purchased a black broadcloth coat trimmed with squirrel collar and cuffs. I bought it in November, 1929, and paid $25.00 for it. Since the warm weather came I notice that the fur is beginning to shed. Can I do anything for the fur so that it will not fall? I can't afford a new coat every year, and this one will have to do another two years. The coat was not reduced or anything, just regular stock. I have not receipt for it. The fur does not look shabby.

G. G.

Doubtless the fur was perfectly all right when you bought it. But your closet did not get the winter frost it should have had or the washing down with moth destroyer. Moths are simply crazy about squirrel, and I advise you not to lose a day getting your coat to a tailor who will treat the fur chemically and brush it. Take it to a reliable man in the fur business.

DEAR MRS. CARR: I would like to know if it would be all right to send a convalescence card to a young man whom I have not gone out with, but was to go out with a few days after he was hurt.

Thanking you very kindly, I beg to remain

J. K.

Either a card of this kind or a friendly little note would be perfectly in keeping with good taste in the circumstances. I rather lean toward the personal note, myself.

If you knew him well enough to accept an invitation from him.

DEAR MARTHA CARR: Will you please send me any games you know of for a child's birthday party. There will be about 20 children present, ranging in ages from 4 to 10. Both boys and girls.

M. C.

I do not know of anything in the way of a game that pleases the children so much as pinning on the tail of a pig or a donkey while blindfolded. It can be arranged out of doors if the weather is fine and one can add "Drop the Handkerchief," and potato race, even with the very little ones.

With many children, I think you are safer in sticking to those games that have been tried and found successful.

Talks to PARENTS

By Alice Judson Peale

No Room for Argument

HERE are certain types of discipline and commands from which the child must learn at the very outset that there is no appeal, the only possible answer being complete, and at times instantaneous, obedience.

In all matters that relate to his health and safety, the child should learn to accept without question his mother's judgment. What clothes he should wear, what foods he may or may not eat, what medicines he must take, when to cross the street, what time to go to bed—all these are matters in which the child's judgment should be permitted to play no part.

True, he can be helped to a willing obedience through a simple explanation and through the fact that he has always had reason to feel complete confidence in those who command him. But argument about such matters is worse than useless.

In the first place, the child cannot be expected to consider these things as important as they actually are. In the second, debate serves only to increase resistance, to give the child the feeling that if only he talks long enough, he will have things his way.

Once the habit of argument has been established, it consumes hours of his own and his mother's time and energy in a struggle over routine when both he and she could much better occupied.

The habit of instantaneous obedience to the tone of voice which means real danger is a vital one in an environment as full of dangers to little children as our own.

If the child is to learn this perfect obedience in emergencies, mother must keep this particular tone of voice only for moments of real danger. If she cries "Wolf" when there is no wolf, her child may fail to obey at some really crucial moment.

A pleasing sweet sandwich is of chopped pecan nuts mixed with a little honey and spread between thin slices of nut bread.

Mesh for Sports

BY RUTH DORRIS

TWO materials which stand out in the fabrics most employed for sports frocks are the cotton meshes and the silk-like shantung. Mesh is given to diversified styles and varied in the two-piece affair to the one-piece dress with bolero effect.

The dress pictured is in white, maize, flesh, nile green, or in blue, and for trimming has silk lacings. It may be worn with a flannel jacket in one of the dark colors to good advantage.

A clever idea for the mesh frock in white is a yoke of course not forming peek-a-boo cap sleeves. Another attractive model has a caplet which extends in panels down the front of the bodies to the hemline of the skirt. In white, it is contrasted with a striped belt, a bow of this ribbon placed on one shoulder, and the hat band is of the same.

Shantung, fashionable for active sports, is given fresh interest this spring by means of complicated cut and seaming.

For wear with such dresses, the separates are indispensable. A smart belted notched collar jacket or blouse is shown in brown and in skipper blue. Another model in reverse style is in the same colors, indicating a preference for brown with white or blue with white.

The smartest has with which to complete cotton mesh frocks and flannel jackets are berets of the mesh or flannel in a color to match the dress, and the medium brimmed hat of straw in white or natural shade, banded in the color of the jacket.

For wear with sports frocks of darker hues are jackets of white flannel, white jersey, or white silk crepe, and in this instance the hat is the color of the dress.

DAILY STORY FOR CHILDREN

By Mary Graham Bonner

Snowy Stories

THEY sat around the camp fire—John, Peggy, the Little Black Clock and the family of White Foxes, and they were far, far north where people seldom traveled.

With the warm wraps the Clock had brought along and with the fire made out of driftwood they were quite comfortable. And now they began to tell many stories.

"I remember the time," said one of the foxes, "when we had been having night for months and months as we do for half of the year!" John asked.

"Our friend, the Clock, has turned the time ahead so that we are having daytime, and this isn't really very cold weather."

"Do you have night for half a year and then daytime for half a year?"

"That's the way we have it," the Fox answered. "We'll have nothing but daytime now for months. Well, as I was saying, we had been having night for ages and it was really cold. But we did not mind it."

"We had a nice cozy den and we liked our long, dark walks over the frozen places."

"You look so beautiful and yet you're so brave," Peggy said admiringly.

"You don't seem to be afraid of anything," John added.

"Tell me something I think is funny," Peggy said.

"I think it's funny that we call a number of you foxes when we call a number of the members of the family oxen. We never call them oxes and we never call you foxen."

The foxes laughed a little, but not so very much. They felt cheerful and so they laughed, but words meant so little to them in their home far, far north, where people and their talk so seldom came.

The children said good-by and left them. The Clock said the next adventure would be a surprise one!

Larry, adoring Helen Wilson, had not thought of her as the mistress of his home, nor as the mother of his children, nor as anything but an almost disembodied spirit. Of course, he knew that she had beauty of face and grace of figure, but he was aware of these only vaguely. That these were the attributes that had first attracted him to her he knew; he had never been insensitive to a pretty face or form; but he could have indignantly denied that part of his anatomy.

HE stepped back, in simulation of alarm, that was convincing.

"Larry," she reproached him. He dropped his hands beside him. "Why did you come?" he asked tonelessly.

"Why did you do—what you did?" she demanded.

"Marry? Why shouldn't I?" he glared angrily at her. "I told you I make. What difference did that make? To you, I mean. What do you care?"

"Why shouldn't I care?" she countered.

He was in better command of himself now.

"You exchanged five millions for fifty," he jeered. "Wasn't the trade a good one?"

She half turned. "If that is what you have to say—"

"What did you expect to hear?" he asked.

Her lips pouted faintly, as though she were about to weep. It was an old trick of hers, but he had never known that it was tricks, in those lovers' quarrels in which they had occasionally indulged, she had always won quick victory by this insistence at incipient tears.

"Well, we had been friends—hadn't we, Larry?"

Even to him, beset by emotions really incomprehensible to him, this did not ring true.

"Friends? God Almighty, Helen, we were lovers. At least I loved you. And we were engaged to be married. Friends!"

"I loved you, too," she said.

"But how much?" he sneered.

"That isn't fair," she told him.

"Fair? What do you know about fairness? Was it fair to throw me over for an old man?"

You aren't a girl, Larry. You are a girl with a mother who," she paused.

"With a mother who what?" he inquired.

"Who loves me," she finished.

E VEN he, none too acute at the moment, disdained this.

"Loves you?" What do you mean—loves you?" she explained.

"Mother are ambitious," she said.

"Well—she couldn't make you marry Burton," he accused.

"That's what I've found out," she said.

And now, instead of stepping away, she swayed toward him.

"What do you mean by that?" he asked.

The hoarseness of his voice surprised him. It was though someone else were

Marriage For Two

ARTHUR
SOMERS POACHE

CHAPTER FOURTEEN.

It was more than her old charm that was revived. Or, if not more, it was something different, this effect that her nearness, her surrendering forward step, created within him.

She had been upon a pedestal, that pedestal upon which romantic mankind places realistic womankind, and from which woman too readily steps. For man is the romanticist. To his love is not a business, a career, a race-preserving urge. Rather, it is the culmination of youthful dreams, it is an end in itself, not a stepping stone to something else. Home, children, family ties — these may be vaguely encompassed in thoughts of a man when he falls in love, but they are mere incidents in the great bewilderment that is masculine here.

Larry, adoring Helen Wilson, had not thought of her as the mistress of his home, as the mother of his children, nor as anything but an almost disembodied spirit. Of course, he knew that she had beauty of face and grace of figure, but he was aware of these only dimly. That these were the attributes that had first attracted him to her he knew; he had never been able to put a pretense or form; but he would have indignantly denied that part of his admiration at her faithlessness had been due to the knowledge that he could never kiss those lips again, could never hold that graceful body in warm embrace. She was the fulfillment of a dream, that was all.

But now, for the first time, this was no dream woman who stood so near that he could hear her gentle breathing. This was a woman of flesh and blood; a woman of vital unsuspected heretofore by him. He was not enough of a self-analyst to know that Helen had become coquettish, had suddenly become another woman, and awakened desire in him. He thought that this was but a reawakened love, that made his hands reach groupingly for the girl before him.

"So beautiful and yet..." Peggy said admiringly.

"I seem to be afraid of you sometimes I think eggysaid."

"But now, for the first time, this was no dream woman who stood so near that he could hear her gentle breathing. This was a woman of flesh and blood; a woman of vital unsuspected heretofore by him. He was not enough of a self-analyst to know that Helen had become coquettish, had suddenly become another woman, and awakened desire in him. He thought that this was but a reawakened love, that made his hands reach groupingly for the girl before him.

"I am a chance that every American boy does not get. Bryan knows it, and to him it stacks up much higher than his heroines. Of course, he knows he is a hero, because he has been told so, and he likes the admiration and attention that has come of it. But what he did was, and is, sort of something that was just there to be done, and it was up to him to do it. He has an idea about that, and he has an idea about everything else in the same fix would have done it.

Then, he really doesn't feel just right about it, anyway. He treated the other children pretty rough in order to keep them from freezing, and Bryan isn't the kind that enjoys being a "bully." The first thing he did after being revived from his rescue was to apologize for "slapping the little children."

"I'm sorry I had to hit them," he said, "but I couldn't make them keep moving any other way. I slapped some of them pretty hard, and it made them mad, so I slapped them again and they tried to fight me. When they hit me back I didn't mind because I knew they were moving. They wouldn't fight very long, and I had to stop again."

"What did you expect to hear?" he asked.

"His lips pouted faintly, as though the were about to weep. It was an old trick of hers, but he had never known that it was a trick. In those lovers' quarrels in which they had occasionally indulged, she had always come out quick victor by this means of incipient tears.

"Well, we had been friends—hadn't we, Larry?"

Even to him, beset by emotions really incomprehensible to him, the did not ring true.

"Mother knows you're here," she admitted.

He was in better command of himself now.

"You exchanged five millions for it," he jeered. "Wasn't the trade a good one?"

She half turned. "If that is what you have to say—"

"What did you expect to hear?" he asked.

"The papers told enough about your sailing," she said bitterly. "With your new bride, and—"

"I mean—did you know that I was in Biarritz?" he persisted.

"Why not? We read the Paris Herald like everyone else."

"But Burton—does he know I'm here?"

"Why not?" She was amazingly cool for one so emotional a moment ago.

"Aren't your mother?"

"Mother knows you're here," she admitted.

He stared at her. She had flushed slightly, was less the doll than she had ever been in his acquaintance with her.

"When did you sail?" he asked.

"On the very next boat after you did," she cried. "Did you think that I could stay in New York—know that every one was deriding—"

"You aren't a girl, Larry. You aren't a girl with a mother who—"

"She paused.

"With a mother who what?" he asked.

"Who loves me," she finished.

E VEN he, none too acute at the moment, disdained this.

"Loves you? What do you mean—loves you?"

"Mothers are ambitious," she explained.

"Well—she couldn't make you marry Burton," he accused.

"That's what I've found out," she said.

And now, instead of stepping away, she swayed toward him.

"What do you mean by that?" he asked. The haughtiness of his voice surprised him. It was as though someone else were speaking, and as though he were looking on, listening.

"Do I need to make it clearer?" she retorted.

"Are you telling me that you have decided not to marry him?" he asked.

"I don't know what I'm telling you—except that I can't stand it if you're cross with me."

Some day he would analyze these words of hers, would reduce them to their ultimate absurdity. But not now. She was young, she was beautiful. Another woman, equally as young and infinitely more beautiful, had denied him herself, had made it clear that she would always deny herself to him. But here was a woman with whom he had been genuinely in love, in love with the spirit and not with the person, who was intimating promises to him.

"Are you blaming me?"

He wrinkled his forehead whimsically. "Well, I didn't break our engagement. But let's not blame anyone—me, you, your mother—any one. A mistake has been made that's all. Now we must rectify it."

"Suppose," she suggested, "that to see all the places and things he was in the bus along. It seems to him just a trifle unfair that he should be singled out for the honor. At least Clara Smith might go along. Clara was one of the girls in the bus who once during the 21 hours of snowbound isolation started out with him to find help. But the snow was more than they could break through.

The invitation to Washington came after President Hoover returned from his Caribbean trip and read of the tragedy. He was so impressed by the account of what Bryan did that he sent the invitation at once.

And instead of joy, Bryan at first was rather upset.

"We were all in the bus together," he told his mother, "and the other kids did just as much as I. Now they'll think I'm getting more than I deserve."

But it would be discourteous to refuse on that account, he decided, and of course he wanted to go, very much. It will mean a chance except that he has heroic stuff.

He attended that evening.

For Bryan's life has been pretty much confined to the immediate vicinity of his ranch home on the prairie in Southeastern Colorado.

The family formerly lived on a farm near Union Star, Mo., where he started school, but moved to Colorado some years ago. There is nothing extraordinary about him—at first it was feared he might not recover. His brother, to whom he had given part of his clothing, was one of those frozen to death.

The school bus, driven by Carl Miller, had left the Townhouse school early in the morning with the 20 children, when the heavy blizzard made it necessary to close the school. Seven miles from the school the blizzard was so bad the road was lost, and Miller turned back. Then the bus stuck.

B OOKS, tablets, and finally seats of the bus were burned in an old cream can to keep the children warm, but after they had remained there all night, and one of the children had died, Miller left in search of help. His body was found later in the snow.

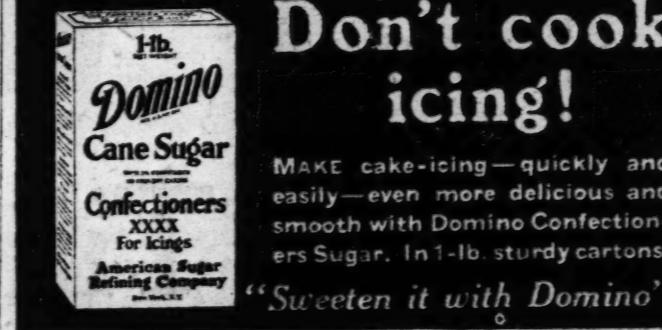

Bryan had been left in charge of the children, and he gave his clothing to the others, and made them fight to keep warm. When the bus was discovered hours later, Miller was still cold, clad at the steering wheel, unconscious. He revived long enough to insist to his father, the first to reach the bus, that he be taken out last.

A Place for Ravelings

A great deal of the litter from sewing may be avoided if the housewife will just keep the top drawer of her sewing machine empty and as she sews she will put all the loose threads, clippings, ravelings, etc., in there. At the end of the day she has only to empty her drawer into the trash basket and all the sewing remnants are gone.

GLEAMING teeth and healthy gums mean so much to animation and charm. Of course you realize it! Yet how will you decide the best way to care for your teeth and gums? There are so many different dentifrices and conflicting theories.

Read the following summary of the replies received from an investigation made by a leading research institution among 50,000 dentists. The answers agree on one type of dentifrice:

95% of the answers stated that germ acids most frequently cause tooth decay and gum irritation;

95% agreed that the most serious trouble occurs at the place where teeth and gums meet;

85% stated that the best product to prevent these acids from causing decay and irritating the gums is Mills of Magnesia.

Isn't this convincing evidence that Squibb Dental Cream will help you take good care of your gums and teeth? It is made with more than 50% Squibb Milk of Magnesia.

Squibb's cleans beautifully. Teeth gleam. And it is thoroughly safe. Contains no grit, no astringent—nothing which might injure. Try it.

By the Associated Press.
PUERTO CABEZAS, Nicaragua, April 15.—Nine Americans have been killed by Nicaraguan insurgents in the vicinity of Logtown, about 70 miles from here, since Saturday morning.

The insurgents, who attacked a lumber camp there by surprise and have slain a large number of Nicaraguans, although meeting with some reverses at the hands of the Nicaraguan Guardia Nacional, with American marine officers. Previous information was that four Americans were killed and three were missing.

United States marines from the U.S. S. Asheville landed today to protect the populace.

The insurgents suddenly appeared at Logtown about 7 a.m. Saturday, barely giving the commissary clerk the time to call the Wawa Junction telephone exchange. He shouted "help" into the mouthpiece and ran, leaving the receiver down.

The Wawa operator was able to hear the bandits as they looted the Logtown commissary and notified Puerto Cabezas and other encampments in the vicinity.

Aid Sent by Auto.
An automobile carrying William Selser, "Plinkie" Wilson and Arthur Curtis, Americans, took a marine and four of the Guardia toward the lumber camp, but stopped some distance away to await Capt. Harlen Peiley and four more of the Guardia, before proceeding to Logtown.

When they were near the place the insurgents, who had prepared an ambush, opened fire from behind, killing Capt. Peiley and wounding a Guardia and Selser, who died later. A fight followed and after a while the insurgents withdrew, the Guardia picking up their dead and wounded and returning to the commissary, reporting the fight to Puerto Cabezas.

The insurgents had tapped the wires and were listening to the appeal for help, so that when Lieut. Clyde Roy Darrah, Ralph Beardsley and 20 men from Puerto Cabezas approached they found another ambush and were isolated in a fight, killing eight of them, including the high Guardia leader, Pedro Blandon.

The Guardia detachment arrived at Puerto Cabezas yesterday afternoon exhausted, Blandon bringing Blandon's sword. Three of their number were wounded. They said the insurgents had attacked many farms in the area, killing everyone except their sympathizers, who were identified by red handkerchiefs which they wore around their necks.

Reports brought here said the bodies of victims were cut into small pieces with machetes and the heads impaled on fence pickets. A building and bridge were burned and rails torn up.

Another Attack Feared.
The gunboats Asheville arrived here early yesterday morning in failure to land a detachment of marines immediately to reinforce the Guardia here caused dismay among both Americans and Nicaraguans, who are in fear of another attack from the insurgents, who are numerous and well armed. The names of Americans killed in the fighting and in attacks the insurgents are:

Capt. Harlen Peiley, U. S. Marine.
W. H. Bond Jr., Sarasota, Fla.
Percy Davis, Hammond, La.
Hubert Wilson, New Orleans.
J. D. Phelps, Baton Rouge, La.
